Mmmmmm. I think it's cherry. No, it has to be banana. How about grape?

Combine these with countless others and your delicious new flavor will be Garfield Heights.

There isn't and couldn't be one flavor that describes Garfield. Faculty and students are all unique in one way or another, yet they came together for a common purpose each day. After the school year, students go away missing their friends or teachers. It's the people here that makes Garfield its own special flavor.

No day was the same, either. If it wasn't Spirit or Challenge Week, it was the crazy antics some students always seemed to create in the classroom or halls. And if it wasn't loads of homework that had to be finished during those last five minutes of lunch, it was worrying about that unavoidable book report due later that day.

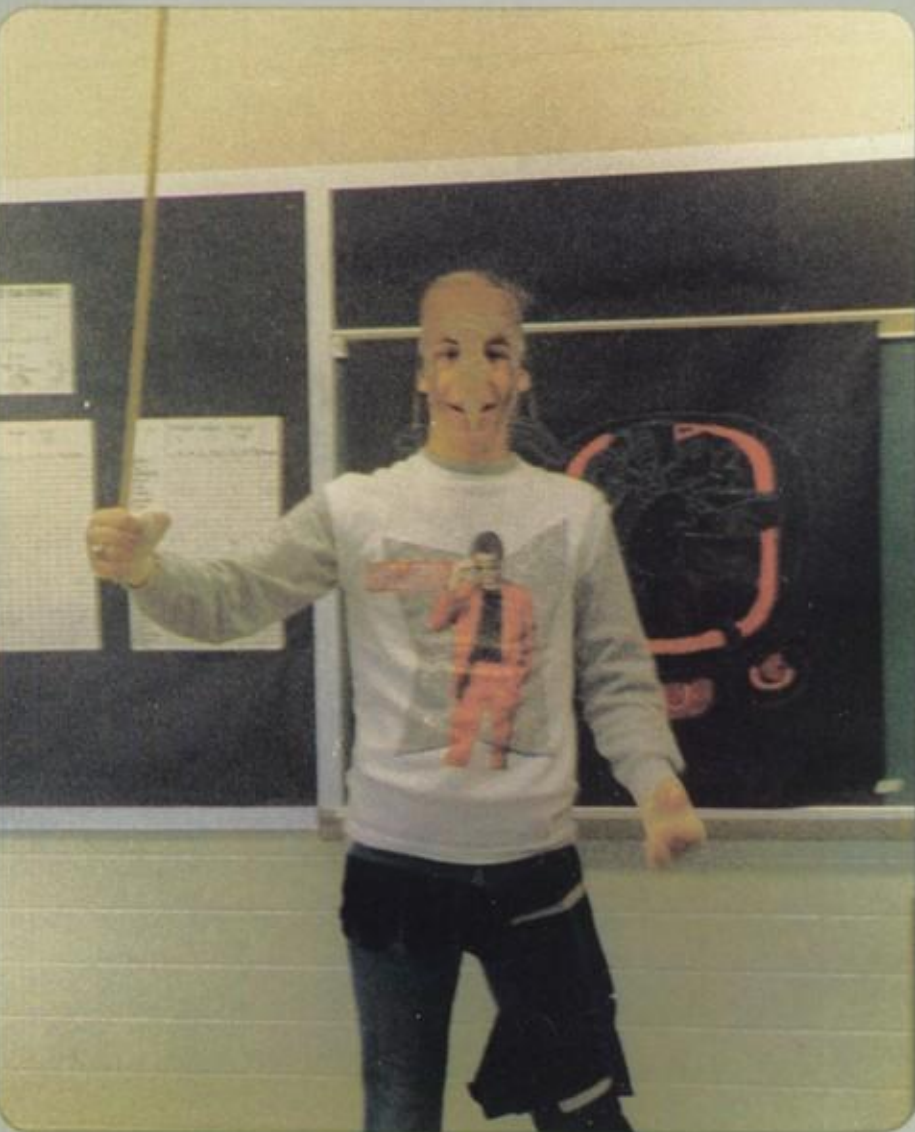

There were many different flavors here. The Garfield student couldn't be labeled "prep," "jock," or "burnout" because each person was different, and that's why at Garfield Heights High students are the flavors.

Flavor explosion

What does school mean to you? Is it the piles of overloaded homework assignments? Or that early morning rush hour? Is it the dreaded report cards? Maybe a building that just takes up your time? How about a place to prepare for the future?

To each person that attended Garfield Heights High, it meant something different because the nearly 1200 Garfield students are definitely not the same. The students, who were all at school for a purpose, found that Garfield had much to offer. They could have taken a wide range of academic classes and become prepared for college. On the other hand, some people came to classes because they had to; school may not have been what they wanted out of this year. There were still students who found Garfield to be a great place for athletics, where sporting events and practices took up most of their time. Clubs may have meant a lot to those students who wanted to be a part of the school itself through publications or maybe performing arts.

Sometimes the same faces were often seen at most of the activities and sporting events. These were the all-around students that seemed to be involved in just about everything. Some students always seemed to dress up in fashion, while others had the more casual school day look.

Each student thought of Garfield as a different flavor. Each came to school for a different purpose; maybe a few shared the same. Every day the halls were filled with a collage of faces and colors, moving from class to class, either fast or slow. Between classes, the five minutes was valuable time. A few guys and girls would be gathered on the first floor, while others desperately tried to open their trick lockers. A couple would talk for that brief moment, and nearby some friends were playing a joke on each other. Until 3:20 rolled around, it was pretty quiet around Garfield. But when the bell finally rang, some scattered home, others had mandatory meetings, and still the athletic teams practiced.

The daily routine was usually forgotten when students awaited breaks for the holiday—a time to rest, yet many thought of friends from school. The students didn't miss the homework, report cards, or long lectures, they missed the people.

Garfield High was its people.

STUDENT LIFE

What were the flavors of Garfield? There seemed to be as many flavors as Baskin Robbins had ice cream.

Challenge Week gave the school five days of craziness and witches and goblins terrorized Garfield on Halloween. Then there were the whispers through the halls about the Homecoming court and dance. There was excitement during Spirit Week with the Powder Puff and Homecoming festivities. Assemblies broke up the monotonous routine of high school days. Outside of school, students held part-time jobs and did volunteer work at places like Marymount Hospital.

But just as much a part of student life were those private, personal moments spent together with that special someone, whether it was a friend or a steady guy or girl. Every student at Garfield found his own flavor of life.

Wild and crazy! -

What do poodle skirts, sombreros, funky clothes, sweatsuits, and nice dresses remind you of? What else but Challenge Week at Garfield Heights High.

Challenge Week was a time for students and teachers to show their spirit and support their class. The week was filled with surprises ranging from sweatsuits to dresses. This year's Challenge Week was held March 18-22 and gave everyone a chance to act out of the ordinary and have a great time.

As a tradition, students fight the faculty and each other to see who has the most spirit. Last year's week opened with hat day, and on Tuesday a sea of sweatsuits, ranging from hot pink to bright yellow, blinded students in the halls.

THE BALLOON BUST competition keeps students and faculty prancing about the gym in mad hysteria.

BEING NOURISHED by a baby bottle, Mr. Jambor gulps every last drop to help the faculty gain more points.

Wednesday was a day for students and faculty to go back in time and dress up in poodle skirts, bobby socks and saddle shoes on Fifties Day. Plaids and stripes, checkers and squares were featured on Mismatch Day, and blue and gold finished the week on Friday.

However, this wasn't quite the end. The Almost Anything Goes assembly proved to be successful as students and teachers joined in such activities as the tricycle race, pop drinking, and relay races.

"I had a great time watching everyone, especially in my class," stated Melissa Erney.

"It was a ball!" exclaimed Michelle Flis.

On October 4 students at Garfield Heights High anxiously crowded into the gym for one of the most exciting assemblies held throughout the year. The question on their minds was obvious: who would be crowned the 1984-85 Homecoming King and Queen?

After what seemed to be an endless wait, the trumpets sounded and the names were revealed. The Homecoming Queen was Janel Ciricola, and the Homecoming King was Scott Asche. Also elected to the court were Bill Pelka, Ginette Piros, Kevin Rawlins, Karen Torgerson, Ron Summers, Danielle Wild, Paul Dunn, Kim Kucinich, Donna Logie, Mark D'Agostino, Kim Westerfield, and John Nemeth. As the assembly came to a close, students from all grades ran to congratulate the court.

Then October 5 the court was introduced at the football game. The band and Mixed Ensemble performed the traditional halftime show. Last year's king and queen, Chris Monaco and Darlene Shutty, were on hand to crown Scott and Janel.

Ceremonies came to an end at Saturday night's dance, and another Homecoming became a memory.

SENIORS ANXIOUSLY AWAIT the announcement of king and queen at the Homecoming assembly.

King, Queen

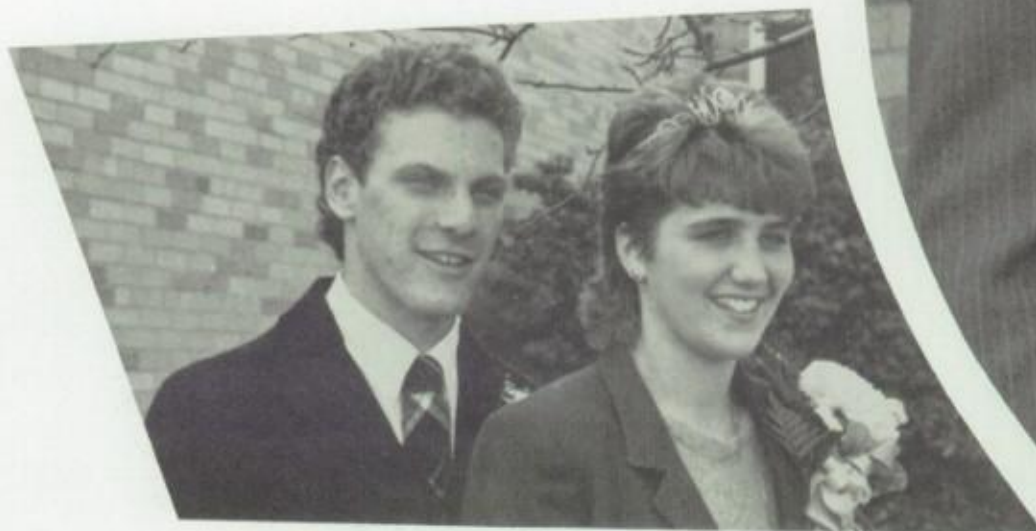

Versatile, athletic, and most of all friendly, Scott Asche was honored with the well-earned title of Homecoming King. In school Scott was involved in football, basketball, baseball, and was an editor for the school paper, the Mirror. After he graduates, Scott hopes to pursue a career in journalism but is undecided on which college he will attend.

Scott enjoys hanging out with close friends Nick Labella and Harry Corsi. You might see him at the movies or at a party on weekends. "I like people who are kind, honest, and considerate," he says.

Scott is a person who likes a challenge and has a competitive spirit. Last summer he was involved in baseball tryouts in Cincinnati, a real honor and challenge for a person who was only 17 at the time.

"I strive to be the best possible athlete I can be," says Scott, "and I'm very happy that I have two wonderful parents who come to the games and give me support."

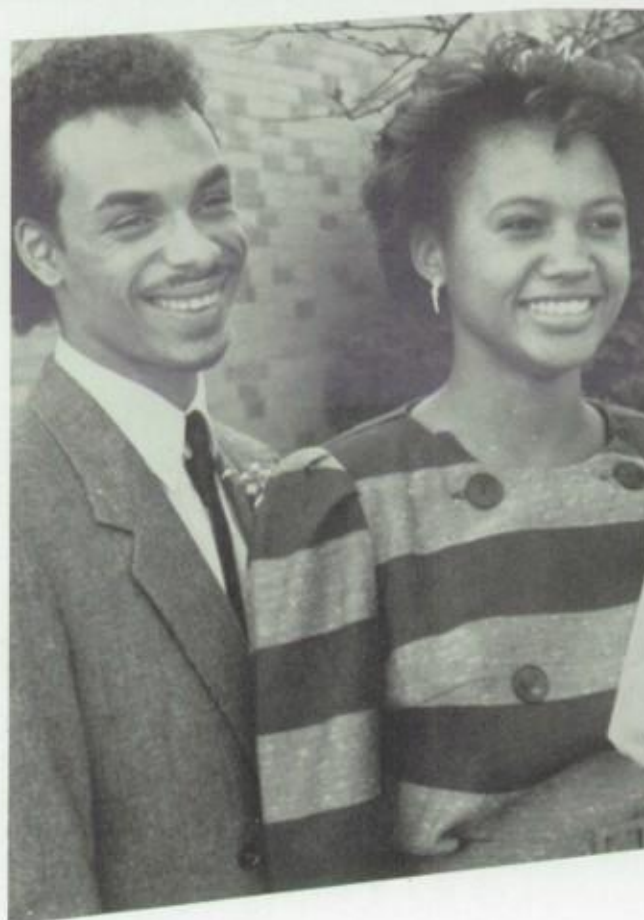

A side of Scott that may not be seen by a lot of people is his great sense of humor. "I can take a joke," he says, and to that his friends will readily agree.

Paul Dunn was quarterback of the football team, president of National Honor Society, and a member of the varsity bowling squad. He hopes to become a certified public accountant. Karen Torgerson hopes to attend Miami University and major in political science. She was involved in volleyball, basketball, Student Senate, and was vice president of the senior class. "I thought Homecoming was an exciting experience that let you kick off your shoes and get crazy," remarked Karen.

Ronnie Summers wants to go to college to study radiology. A member of the track team, Ronnie was surprised about Homecoming but had a great time. Kim Westerfield attended JVS in hopes of becoming a medical secretary or nurse. She works at Arby's and enjoys skating and basketball.

Bill Pelka was involved in football and track. His plans for after graduation? "I just want to take a vacation!" Danielle Wild took dental assisting at JVS. She hopes to go to either Tri-C or Cleveland State for dental hygiene. Danielle works at the rec center and enjoyed playing varsity volleyball.

Garfield Heights High's 1984 Homecoming Queen Janel Ciricola certainly has many of the outstanding traits usually associated with this honor. Janel was elected Queen by her schoolmates, highlighting a busy and successful career at Garfield.

Janel is planning on attending Cleveland State University to major in business management. She was very active in school. Not only was she senior class treasurer, she was also Student Senate secretary. She played on the varsity volleyball team as well.

When her school schedule wasn't keeping her busy, Janel found time to work at Wendy's for a part-time job which helped her cover her expenses and prepare a little bit for college.

"Homecoming was a lot of fun," said Janel. "It was an experience I'll never forget."

Janel was the guest of honor at the annual Homecoming Dance October 6, along with King Scott Asche and the rest of the court. Between the dance, the assembly, the rally and motorcade, and the Homecoming football game, Janel gathered enough memories to last her a lifetime.

and Court

Ginette Piro was a student at JVS in the legal secretary program. After graduation Ginette hopes to become a secretary and then go to college to be a para-legal. Kevin Rawlins hopes to major in aerospace technology at college. He was involved in football at Garfield and intended to "have a good time and enjoy my senior year."

Kim Kucinich wants to get into public relations and would like her own talk show. She will go to CSU to major in communications. Kim was Student Senate president, played volleyball, and was in Ski Club and on the Mirror staff. Mark D'Agostino plans to go to CSU for business administration. Mark was involved in baseball, basketball, soccer, and played trumpet in the band.

Donna Logie wants to attend either Akron or Cleveland State to major in business or criminal law. Donna, who was involved in volleyball and Student Senate, enjoys figure skating and jazzercise. John Nemeth studied data processing at JVS and was president of the executive council for P.M. classes at JVS. John was also parliamentarian of his class. He said he was shocked about making court and had a great time.

Shootout at Generic City

It was the greatest Powder Puff game in Garfield history—a thriller from start to finish. The "generic" seniors came from behind in the closing seconds to defeat a determined band of juniors, 18-14, in one of Spirit Week's big events.

The week began as usual with Concert T-shirt Day, featuring Cyndi Lauper, Bruce Springsteen, and Ratt. On Tuesday Michael Jackson and "Wanna Smurf Around?" Buttons seemed to be most popular while Lisa McAloney proudly wore "The Beaver" for Button Day.

Sophomores broke tradition on Wednesday by beating the seniors' "Generic City" hallway with their first place "Candy Land" theme. Even though many seniors dressed in black and white to complement their generic hallway, they finished second in the deck-the-halls competition.

Thursday was a day of cheers and tears to share. The Homecoming court was announced at an assembly during seventh period. Later that evening, the motorcade honked its way down Turney Road with the choir car winning first place. "I made so many flowers," lamented senior Wendy Trzaska, "but in the end it was fun decorating the car and riding in the motorcade."

Then came the Powder Puff game, featuring an exciting battle between two evenly-matched teams. "It was a smashing game!" exclaimed Rene Doubrava, and that was true in more than one sense! However, as usual, the shapely Powder Puff cheerleaders grabbed their share of the spotlight, too. "Spirit Week was great," commented senior cheerleader Doug Schrader, "but being a Powder Puff cheerleader is where it's at!"

Summing up the feeling of many Garfield students, Terri Vyskocil said, "It was the best Spirit Week ever!"

Unreal people

Once upon a time, not too long ago, a strange ritual appeared in the hallowed halls of Garfield High. Students, dressed as all sorts of lullwigs and gurblesmurfs, popped up on October 31st. Green Morkybiggs and purple Horkypoos were commonplace every year to the amazement of the teachers and advisors. This year was no different.

At 8 a.m. the doors to Garfield High opened to welcome a troop of snorting Singaphors and a group of Bwgieta-blefinks. The reactions of the teachers were normal considering the drooling Dronydonks staring at them from their seats. "I expected as much from the students," said one, and "I really don't know what this school is coming to," said another.

Walking down the hall, one couldn't help noticing the Honeyflicks walking with the large orange Plinkoid to the zipcore in the corner of the solcortle. The Plinkers were plinking and the Linforks were ziming near the Zoomers. "Never walk on the full moon when the water is high in the paper," said a costumed Finkled Free in full magents plumage.

Oh, sorry. I got carried away. Here's what really happened. Students got dressed up in costumes. They came to school, stayed for the day, and went home. That's all.

Thank you.

Come sail away

Imagine yourself on a romantic Love Boat cruise with the sweet aroma of carnations and a gentle mist in the air. This was the setting for seniors who sailed on the Senior Dance Love Boat February 2.

Cruise director Sandy Gurtz welcomed everyone aboard for the festivities. While on board, seniors traveled to "Erotic City" for a "Celebration." The entertainment navigator, Captain D. Jay, kept the class of 1985 dancing to the beat. Said Scott Asche: "It was one helluva time!"

Every detail, from the lifesavers to the wine glasses to the Hawaiian leis, made the evening a tremendous success. Laurel Cywinski commented, "It was very well done. I had a really great time." Jim Svab best summed up the evening by saying, "Spectacularly bodacious!"

Fashion flavors

Do you Jou Jou? As you walked down the halls this year, you noticed that Garfield has really changed its style. More and more students were wearing what was in fashion. The styles were radical and fun: oversized sweatshirts, jackets, and yes, pants. The colors: fuchsia, chartreuse, neon orange.

Students took a wide interest in their clothing. Beth Stolarczyk commented, "Many of the students who last year laughed at the way other students in style dressed are the ones who are dressing up and in style this year."

Many of the guys started to wear the latest fashions. Chams was a very popular name on the clothing of many male students. But there were still a few guys who were satisfied with jeans and a T-shirt or sweatshirt.

When some guys saw a tie on a girl, they wondered, "Aren't ties for guys?" Little did they know, men's clothing had become popular with girls. High tops were a big item, especially pink ones.

Many guys made comments to girls about the way they dressed: "Where's the flood?" or "Are those your pants from second grade?" Well, sorry guys; these girls wearing short pants weren't preparing for a flood. They were the right size. What they were wearing were crop pants, and many girls in school had a pair.

Jeans were still a favorite with everyone, and sweatsuits were also popular. Preps, jocks, free spirits, intellectuals, casuals: they all could be found in the halls of Garfield Heights High.

Music mania

Once upon a time, Garfield Heights High School produced two musicals, one a disaster and the other a smashing success.

Mr. Surace and Mr. Jones were pleased with the outcome of the performance last spring. River City, Iowa, was faced with "The Music Man" (Jim Walchanowicz). Not even Marian the Librarian (Mary Siciliano) could handle the Trouble with a capital "T" he brought. The 65 cast members "put together a show in six weeks and overcame many difficult problems," commented Mr. Surace.

"The Music Man" proved to be a success, but what about "The Great All-American Musical Disaster?" ("This is not a musical.") With a lineup of stars such as Gigi Fontaine (Lori Gorenc), Bob Everlove (Matt Bellina), and the popular comedian Chuckles Malone (Marlene Coffaro), the movie was heading for disaster in just one scene itself.

Luckily, Carmen (Denise Geary) and Bob Everlove's devoted fans (Gina Flama and Kelly McIntyre) pulled the acts together, and Garfield survived what would have been a catastrophe.

All's well that ends well. The disaster was averted, and they all lived happily ever after.

Working class

Records cost $10. Clothes are expensive. A reliable car will cost at least $1000. College tuition can be as much as $15,000 per year. If you're a teen in today's society, necessities and luxuries such as these can be very expensive. As a result, more and more high school students were working part-time jobs.

Perhaps the most common of these jobs was working in a fast food restaurant. Gary Hering, a Garfield junior, has been working at the Broadway-Libby McDonald's for over a year. "They always keep you busy," he said. "You're always doing something." Senior Elaine Ihrig, who worked at Burger King, agreed, adding, "Towards the weekend it gets even worse."

Some students have forgone life in the fast food lane to work in retail stores. Senior Rene Doubrava has not regretted her decision to do so. She worked at Film Craft for more than a year and feels she has benefitted. "I've learned a lot about film and cameras. The customers share their mistakes with me so I can help others in the future."

Another senior who gained a great deal from her job is Kim Kidwell. Kim worked at Video Plus. She feels her job taught her "how to handle different types of people: how they act, how you should treat them."

In addition to earning money, having a part time job in high school can be a starting block for a career. Junior Tony Trivisonno began preparing for a career in auto mechanics over two-and-a-half years ago with his job at Garfield Sunoco.

From babysitting to burger broiling, many Garfield students found themselves members of the high school working class.

Yuletide joy

Another Christmas season came and went, and it wouldn't have been the same without the Yuletide Feast performed by the choir and directed by Mr. Jones and Mr. Surace.

Many hours of preparation were put into this year's performance, and it showed when it was presented for a crowd of about 300 on Sunday, December 9. This was the moment when lines had to be known, props ready when needed, and all words articulated in order to get across their true meaning. Although it appeared that there was tension throughout the cast, they all put on a superb performance.

Steve McQuerry, who sang

"Bring a Torch" with Lynmarie Malec, said, "Practices weren't all fun and games. There were a lot of lines and songs to learn, and it took a long time. I think everyone who took part in the Feast enjoyed himself."

The drab greens and yellows of the cafeteria were enlightened with colorful barriers of dragons, knights in full armor, and crowns and scepters which added to the Medieval setting. "We have all of this beautiful artwork," said Mr. Jones at a Sunday afternoon rehearsal. "Now all we have to do is bring it to life."

SADD story

Garfield students, more than ever, are reaching out to help other people in many different ways.

This year many students got involved in the new group called SADD (Students Against Driving Drunk). This group originally got started nationally by a former teacher and hockey coach from Boston. He has been all over the United States trying to get students to form groups at their schools. Garfield students joined hundreds of teenagers from other area high schools December 4 at the Coliseum to learn about SADD. Junior Tracy Horvath stated, "I'm really glad I got involved because after seeing all of the movies, it really moved me and made me think."

After returning to Garfield, over 20 students got involved and formed a local SADD chapter here. Mrs. Brooks put a lot of time and effort towards helping and leading this group to make other students aware of the dangers of drinking and driving. The members elected Sandy Gurtz and Amy Rawlins as chairpersons.

During study halls throughout the day while some were studying or sleeping, other students volunteered their help tutoring students. A group of students also volunteered to help

Mrs. Daugherty and the Red Cross on Blood Day November 29.

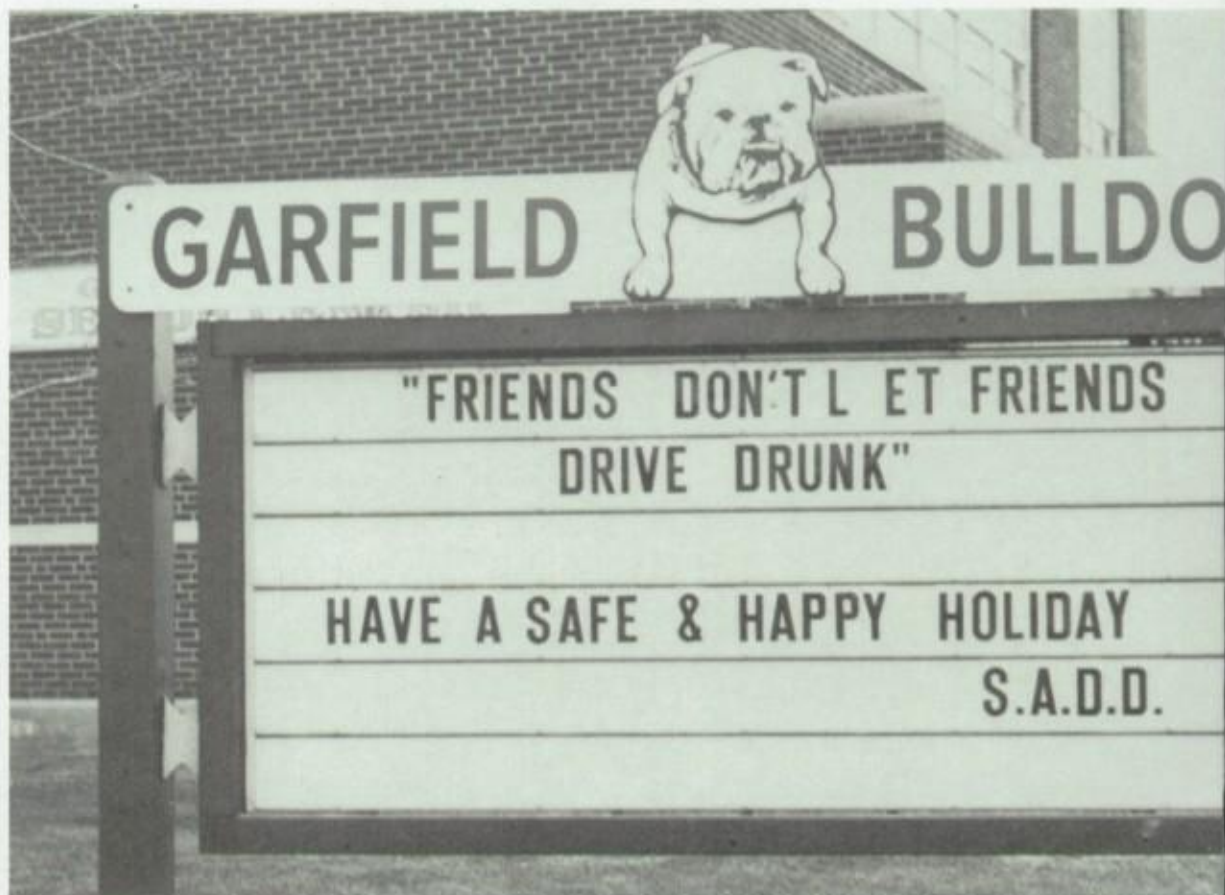

Outside of school, Garfield students could be found reaching out to people at places like Marymount Hospital or the senior citizens center, trying to make life a little brighter or safer for others.

REACHING OUT

From blue and gold to scarlet and gray, Garfield students were treated to a colorful variety of assemblies this year.

"Bulldogs, Bulldogs, bow-wow-wow, G-H-S!" The melody of the Garfield fight song filled the gym at the football pep rally in August. Players were acknowledged and urged to beat their opponents. A certain kind of school unity became apparent as students joined together.

When football season was over, the energy and spirit moved on to basketball. "I liked watching the teachers play against the students," stated Melissa Erney after watching the two teams battle to a 10-10 tie at the basketball rally. In February, the other winter sports teams were honored at an end-of-the-season assembly.

What really brightened the year's assembly schedule, however, was the performance of the Scarlet and Gray from Ohio State. Since most assemblies usually feature athletics, students enjoyed the opportunity to see people with another kind of talent.

"They entertained us so well that I really wanted to get more involved in our music program," commented Michelle Falcone. The morning assembly featured Ohio State's traveling show choir, who performed a variety of popular tunes for the Garfield students.

In the end, what came shining through was the feeling of pride and competitive spirit that showed on the faces of so many students. Joel Cromika summed it up best by saying, "It felt so good when you're trying your best, giving it your all, and getting cheered on when standing in front of your peers. It's just a great feeling!"

Everybody bop

One flavor of activity that had been missing at Garfield for some time returned in a big way this year. Students flocked to the high school on Friday and Saturday nights to dance.

The traditional dances were still popular. Spirit Week offered the annual Homecoming Dance to honor the queen, king, and court. The Class of '85 sponsored the Senior Dance in February. And graduates ended the year with the senior prom, a formal affair complete with dinner.

But it was the addition of so many informal dances that seemed to make the difference this year. Student Senate revived the Sadie Hawkins Day dance in March, giving girls a chance to ask guys out for the evening. The senior class tried a sock hop in the cafeteria after one of the wrestling matches in January. It proved to be a huge success, so the senior class joined SADD in sponsoring a Heart-to-Heart dance February 15 after a basketball game. Once again the cafeteria was filled with dancing students.

The rebirth of dances at the high school reflected the popularity of local dance spots which Garfield students frequented. Two of the most popular places were the Akron Agora and the Mining Company.

Whether at school or a night spot, dancing was a great way to relax, meet people, and spend an enjoyable evening with your friends.

There could never be only one club that everybody wants to be part of because of the various interests students possess. Each flavor of activity at Garfield was by no means the same.

Students attacked the slopes of Brandywine as members of Ski Club, while foreign language clubs added zest to the year of Spanish and German students. NHS sponsored the Homecoming dance and a Christmas party for teachers and their children, and school spirit was kept high by Student Senate's many projects during the year. Cheerleaders had the crowd clapping their hands and stomping their feet, while the yearbook staff battled with the Mirror for space in the publications office.

From JCWA to the music groups, each club had its own touch of class that made it worthwhile. There was bound to be one flavor at Garfield for everybody.

Band bond

What were you doing from 9 to 12:30 every morning in August? If you were in the band, you were probably here at school marching.

Many people would not be willing to make sacrifices such as this. However, as band president Jim Svab explained, to be in the band you must be "dedicated to music and to your instrument."

The first "concerts" the band gave this year were at football games. Other performances included the November 8 concert, the Christmas concert, and pop concert February 8, and the spring concert May 3. Garfield also hosted this year's solo and ensemble contest

February 16.

In addition to marching band, some students played in a small group called jazz band.

Perhaps the members of band performed so well because they had an excellent teacher. "Mr. Shively was the most interesting thing about being in band," said Jim. "He can motivate the students as well as keep them under control." Jim Evans elaborated: "Mr. Shively's more of a friend to us than a teacher."

Mr. Shively shared the band's affection. "In six years you can develop a closeness you can't get in just a one-year course. We're just like a family."

Halftime dazzle

"Flags!" was the one word captain Mary Janieszewski yelled to gather 10 girls each day at practice. The Flag Corps, Majorettes, and new Dance Line worked hard this year to make the 1984 halftime shows better than ever.

The girls practiced since the middle of June with instructor Nancy Melcher-Webb. Nancy made up most of the routines, while captains Mary Janieszewski, Debbie Schultz, and Connie Ratka filled in the odds and ends.

The Majorettes attended Lake Erie College for a three-day session last summer; the Flag Corps joined them during the last session to help them prepare for their halftime features.

The Majorettes twirled to pop songs such as "Thriller" and "All Night Long," while the Flags performed to "Gauche" and "Far from Over." The Dance Line kicked up their heels during halftime to numbers like "Running with the Night."

Vocal vibes

"Mommy made me mash my M&M's?" If you were in choir, you would know that was one of choir's many warmups. Besides singing, Mr. Jones said, "Learning that there are commitments and responsibilities are a major role. I'm very proud of all my groups."

Choral groups at Garfield included Concert Choir, A'Cappella, and Mixed Ensemble. Says Michelle

Sroka: "A'Cappella means time and hard work. But when we perform, it's all worthwhile. It's really a lot of fun."

Mixed Ensemble was a group of 21 guys and gals dedicated to their music. Misty Geraci said, "Mixed Ensemble is a great experience. I've had a chance to work closely with people and be like a family with them." Last spring they went to New York City and won a first place award in a national contest. This spring the group traveled to Chicago.

Bobby Welch, choir and Ensemble member, concluded, "It's a great experience."

No stopping them

Some people may have thought that there wasn't a whole lot to cheer about during Garfield's football and basketball seasons this year—but twelve girls didn't let that stop them. The cheerleaders put in two and a half seasons of practice, hard work, and constant support for the Bulldogs.

"No doubt about it: we have the best cheerleading squad in the LEL," said Mr. Jambor, who sponsored the cheerleaders for basketball season. "I've been to all the games and seen all the squads. In cheerleading Garfield is number one."

Under the guidance of Ms. Borgio, cheerleaders practiced and performed at football games last fall and boosted the other sports teams, too. The girls entered all of the Spirit Week contests, winning prizes for their banner and poster.

During basketball season, the varsity performed dance routines to songs like "Operator," "Freak Show," and "Work Your Body." When they weren't busy practicing, making posters, or decorating players' lockers, the cheerleaders were busy plotting ways to steal the "power pack."

"It was a powerful experience," said Kim Furcsik, "and a lot of fun."

"We were willing to try anything to make our squad better," commented captain Laurel Cywinski. "We had a good time. We made our own fun."

Picas & pop tarts

Picas, pop tarts, dupers, posters, pictures, Mr. Bill, Dyno-Mike, and Big Boy: what do all of these things have in common? By themselves, not much, but put together they became part of the 1985 yearbook and its unique staff.

Throughout the year many students put a lot of work into this book. It all started in August when key members of the staff went to Oberlin College for camp. There the great Jim Barbour, their fearless leader, led them through layout after layout after layout! After an evening of brainstorming in the dorm lounge, the staff decided that it was impossible to stereotype the typical Garfield student since there were so many kinds of people here. Thus was born the theme of this year's book, All Kinds of Flavors.

Back at Garfield, Mr. Jambor started the deadlines rolling. Reporters ran around grabbing quotes and giving copy editor Kelley McVoy a nervous breakdown when stories didn't come in on time. Photo editor Barb Polak dispatched her photographers to sporting events, assemblies, classes, and anywhere a good picture could be found, with the instructions to "find different flavor people."

When all this finally came into the yearbook office, editors Lisa Kaliszewski and Amy Rawlins worked hard to put everything together, even if it meant Sunday afternoon at Mr. J's ice house.

In the end everyone's contributions helped All Kinds of Flavors become a tasty treat for all of the students.

Spanning the globe

The Junior Council on World Affairs joined other JCWA groups and participated in a model United Nations at Cleveland State this year. Garfield represented Albania, Chad, Thailand, and Venezuela. Each member learned about his country and wrote papers and resolutions about his country. On February 6 Mrs. Daugherty and the members met with other schools to discuss these issues, and on March 13 they went to CSU for the model UN.

President Diane Perchinske said, "I enjoyed JCWA for its involvement in foreign policy and its relation to the UN."

This year's German and Spanish Clubs sponsored a foreign language dinner. Each club member brought a dinner that fit his country.

Then everyone got to sample the different flavors of foods from the countries.

"Running Spirit Week smoothly seemed to be the best thing Senate accomplished. It was the most exciting thing because of the unity and spirit from all grade levels."

These were the words of Student Senate president Kim Kucinich. Senate was composed of 44 of our school's leaders.

This year Senate members tried some new ideas. For a fund raiser they sold buttons and pictures in the cafeteria. "We also sold calendars. The profits went for dough ornaments for teachers at Christmas time and the Sadie Hawkins Day dance," said Laurel Cywinski. "I liked being involved in Senate because we did so much for the school."

Activities that Student Senate sponsored, such as Challenge Week and Spirit Week, brought school spirit. Getting the community in-involved was another of their aims. They sponsored the Senior Citizens Tea which is always a success.

The year was summed up when Kim said, "Being Student Senate president was an honor and a lot of hard work; hopefully, the tradition will be carried on through the years and bring leadership skills to the students."

News beat

When is our club meeting? What was the basketball score? Without the PA announcements and the Mirror, most people wouldn't know about school activities.

Each morning Cathy Wilkens, Kelley McVoy, Ronda Crayton, and Beth Stolarczyk informed students of upcoming activities on the homeroom announcements.

When they began making the broadcasts this year, most of their time was spent trying to make each other laugh when the microphone was on. Since then, they improved in their technique (and in their tolerance of each other's pranks), and were better able to perform their task.

The Mirror was another integral part of the communications network of the school. One reason, as editor Paul Dunn explained, was that the paper informed students through articles "the whole school could identify with, not just the same cliques each time." Co-editor Scott Asche also considered diversity necessary. "We've come a long way since last year. We systematically improved the paper."

Snow time

It's shoosh time! This year's ski club was made up of many different flavored students. Many of them could be found every Thursday after school, ranging from Champagne to Bourbon, hitting the slopes. No, don't be fooled; these are the names of Brandywine ski slopes.

Luckily, Mother Nature provided good shoosh weather for the skiers, but if Mother Nature was too generous with the cold temps, you could find students in the lodge sipping hot cider or hot chocolate.

President Carl Nemec and vice president Greg Majcher supervised a club that was just too cool!

As for you, Susan, don't worry. Tracy Horvath and Jenny Nemeth will be back to pick you up next year.

NHS hosted LEL

"The key to our success this year was that we got things done well and on time," said Paul Dunn, president of the National Honor Society, which had a busy year including the LEL conference held here.

Part of the reason for that success may have been the NHS recognition conference which Paul and sponsor Mrs. Daugherty attended in October. Presidents and advisors from over 400 NHS groups across Ohio went to Columbus where they discussed the responsibilities of leadership and how to prepare for that task.

Last year's induction ceremony was held May 3 at the Brecksville Party Center. Superintendent Charles Beshara was the featured speaker.

Sponsoring the Homecoming dance was the first major project this year. One activity that NHS sponsored for the first time this year was presenting Honor Roll and Merit Roll students with flowers. Vice president Laurel Cywinski thought this idea was long overdue. "Those students are trying as hard as anyone in athletics, but they don't get the same amount of recognition."

Another service project was the Christmas party for faculty members' children. Representatives from NHS chapters in the other LEL schools met with Garfield members here January 11 to compare ideas.

Pink slip brigade

Being an office page may not seem like an important activity, but the offices' functions would slow down considerably—maybe even stop—without the help of these students.

Duties of office pages included answering phones, filing cards, keeping track of absences and tardies, and delivering pink slips to call students out of class for counselors and administrators.

Pages in the guidance office helped students run computer programs available there. Freshman Jennifer Burgess, one of the pages, thought this was very informative. "I've learned a lot about colleges and careers," she said.

Sophomore Jeanette Glinski also learned a lot being a page in the attendance office. She is going to use this experience to get a head start for her future career as a secretary. Jeanette thought being a page would help "because I'll already know the basics of working in an office." She thought the most difficult thing was "answering the telephones. They would all call at one time, and I'd have to put people on hold."

ACADEMICS

"Homework, homework, give us a break!!" were the cries from all the students who had to stuff practically their whole locker into a small duffle bag. It wasn't enough that a book report was due tomorrow, but the fact that the same teacher assigned Chapter 10 to read for a quiz.

Although Garfield's academics program is one of the finer in Cuyahoga County, students often felt they were overstuffed and needed to go on an academic diet. The flavors of higher English, math, and science courses were taken by many students planning to attend college and further their education.

One factor about academics was where a decent hour of studying could be squeezed in. Maybe it was lunch periods, study halls, in a locked bedroom or a hideaway place cut off from the rest of the world by a lake or blanket of fresh fallen leaves. Wherever or whenever, no matter how bad the taste, it had to be done.

A double dip

Term papers, book reports, map tests ... what else could the English and social studies departments possibly do to students?

They teamed up and offered a new course this year. At first, those adventurous juniors who enrolled in American Studies wondered what they had gotten themselves into. But as the weeks rolled by, the new class taught by Ms. Borgio and Mrs. Daugherty started to make sense. Combining English III and American History, this double dip treat met for two periods each day and offered college-bound juniors an integrated study of American literature and history. The class took field trips to the Play House, spent a day at Fairview Park Library researching term paper topics, and put on an ethnic festival to share the many flavors of American culture with each other. For most, American Studies turned out to be a rewarding experience.

Elective courses such as mass media, speech, journalism, and creative writing were popular. The four mass media classes visited the Plain Dealer, WMMS, and Space Cable to help them understand the operation of these media.

THE TASTE OF AMERICAN STUDIES

Going, ambitious, and hard working are just a few words to describe Amy Rawlins. Throughout the year Amy kept busy with cheerleading, and she was also co-editor of the yearbook. Amy was also active in sports. She represented the junior class in the power puff football game, participated in proms, and played softball.

The new American Studies class was highlighted by Amy's outstanding efforts. She felt the class was "really good for preparing for college." Amy enjoyed the literature and group activities of the class.

Besides everything else, Amy was the junior representative for SADD. Amy's color is lemon-lime because at times she can be mellow while at others she can be really wild and crazy.

Loaded

Three new classes were loaded into the curriculum this year. Approximately 550 students enrolled in computer classes, either Introduction to Computers, Business Computer Processing, or Math Computer Processing.

The introductory course covered topics including a brief history of computers, how the system works, terminology, and a brief introduction to programming. Students also viewed the most talked about TV show of the year, Bits and Bytes. Business Computers got more into programming, command language, format, writing, and editing.

In Math Computers, students learned techniques such as flow-charting, writing and debugging programs, use of numerical and string variables, data manipulation, and decision making.

This year 13 computers were purchased and more may be added next year. Lisa Takacs stated, "I was really excited when I heard the school was purchasing computers." Gina Vartorella added, "It was an exciting course and a great learning experience. I think everyone should take this class."

Meanwhile, students plowed through homework in such classes as algebra, geometry, calculus, trig., and probability, where a handy calculator and good eraser could be a student's best friends.

THE TASTE OF COMPUTERS

There were many facets to Paul Dunn besides his outstanding computer work. The athletic side prefers to play varsity basketball, football, and bowling. Paul was president of National Honor Society and a member of the Mirror staff.

Paul had all available computer classes and was a computer lab assistant for Mr. Krueger. His flavor is Coke because as Paul said, "That's all I drink. Coke is it, just like the commercial."

Trading places

While some students were catching the last of the "Flintstones" or finishing up a bowl of Cheerios, morning JVS students had already arrived at the high school. Afternoon JVS students left when the rest of the school was heading into third period. These daily treks to the Joint Vocational School went unrecognized by many students. However, the bus ride gave JVS students a feeling of freedom and responsibility.

These students traded places for half a day to learn a trade. At JVS there were many job-training classes such as Marine Maintenance. Tim Bosko and Matt Dymidowski rebuilt a boat from scratch so they could take it out on the lake for a party when it was completed. Another technical class was Machine Trades in which Marty Perhavec learned how to use lathes, mills, and drill presses while following blueprints.

On the less mechanical side, Commercial Arts students Sharon Rediger and Ed Budzinski learned about advertising, photography, and fashion designing. Danielle Wild and Debbie Zuchowski learned about teeth and dentistry procedures in Dental Assisting. In Horticulture class, students like Mike Dombrowski learned how to raise grade-A turf landscaping.

Along with these classes were Data Processing, Cosmetology, and Commercial Foods, to name a few. Among all these courses, the general feeling of JVS students was that they enjoyed meeting the different people there. Still, the best thing was that they could learn a trade not offered at the high school.

JVS student Greg Majcher took communications electronics at Brecksville's Joint Vocational School. This dedicated student plans on using this "jump on education" as an advantage in his future, which includes either going to college and majoring in electronics or finding a job with a program that will pay for further training.

Greg's involvement didn't end with his studies; he was also very involved in his home school. He played for Garfield's soccer team, and during Spirit Week took part in the festivities by joining the Powder Puff cheerleading squad. Incidentally, he never looked better in a mini.

During the winter Greg's favorite hobby was skiing down the icy slopes of Brandywine with the Ski Club.

Whether it be working, skiing, or studying, Greg Majcher was just one student who added a little flavor to the halls of Garfield High.

THE TASTE OF OWE

Although he only spent mornings at Garfield Heights High, Jeff Brauer was recognized as one of the most interesting flavors of student at the high school.

Jeff was involved with OWE (Occupational Work Experience) classes for two years. Under the supervision of Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Minor, OWE students experienced a variety of work situations while completing their high school requirements.

Jeff said he enjoyed being in OWE because they learned about all different kinds of jobs. After graduation Jeff plans on becoming a tree cutter for the Metroparks.

During his senior year, Jeff worked as the manager of a car wash and spent a lot of time on one of his main interests, motorcycles.

Classes at work

"Did you know that there are more than 40 practicing certified public accountants in Cleveland today who began in Garfield Heights accounting classes?" asked Mr. Martin proudly.

Accounting was just one area of classes which were on top of the professional scene. IOE offered secretarial skills to girls preparing for office jobs. OWE students learned about the job-oriented world by holding down a variety of part-time jobs from fast food restaurants to factories.

Even though all school classes prepared students for the real world, students in these classes had a head start.

Lab tested

Many people are worried that science education isn't good enough, but at Garfield that wasn't true. The first floor of GHHS was where science came alive. In this hall you came across scents of sulfur and other chemicals coming from room 108. But not only did the school offer chemistry, it had a large selection of science courses ranging from ISI to psychology.

Physics class dealt with the properties, changes, and interactions of matter and energy. "Physics is a good college prep course," commented Kevin Rawlins.

Junior Carrie Ahrens, who had taken earth science during her freshman year, decided to go back and take biology. "It's different being one of the only upperclassmen in the class, but another credit in science will help me prepare for college." Biology dealt with the study of living things and the processes they go through.

Students with green thumbs enjoyed plant ecology. This class was different from the others; it taught students how to raise plants and take care of them.

"Human anatomy is an interesting course if you enjoy studying about the body," stated Dora Pollack. These students spent a lot of time memorizing the technical names of individual body parts. They also dissected an animal.

$H_2O + CO_2 = H_2CO_3$ may be confusing and even mind boggling to some students, but for the future chemist it was a wiz. Students in chemistry and advanced chemistry learned all about the different elements and the compounds they form. This type of formula became second nature to them.

Science was one field of study that required a lot of work, but it was important for those who wanted to continue their education beyond high school. Students may have spent long nights studying for a test, but it was all worth it in the end.

-Tracy Horvath

THE TASTE OF SCIENCE

One student that came to mind when thinking about science was Michael Flis.

Mike plans on entering college after high school. He isn't sure which one he will attend, but he wants to major in computer science. Mike has his own IBM PC computer to help him get started on his goals. He used it as much as possible, especially when doing homework.

Mike didn't only involve himself in homework; he also joined other activities. He was a member of NHS, was an audio visual assistant, and played sax for the marching band.

Mike said that his flavor was in the form of a cheese danish. "It's the food of the jazz band," he explained.

-Kelley McVoy

Welcome to the first floor

The school may be made up of many flavors, but on the first floor it was a variety of aromas that tingled your nostrils. The burnt remains of an upside-down cake combined with the hamster-cage smell of sawdust to let students know they had just entered the practical arts zone.

From Food Tech, which gave experience in cooking and nutrition, came the tantalizing aroma of cinnamon rolls, zucchini bread, or a lean cuisine entree. Students in Interior Decorating coordinated vivid patterns and looked to the future when they would purchase their own pad. Child Development showed students the fetus' life cycle and how it develops into a functioning human being.

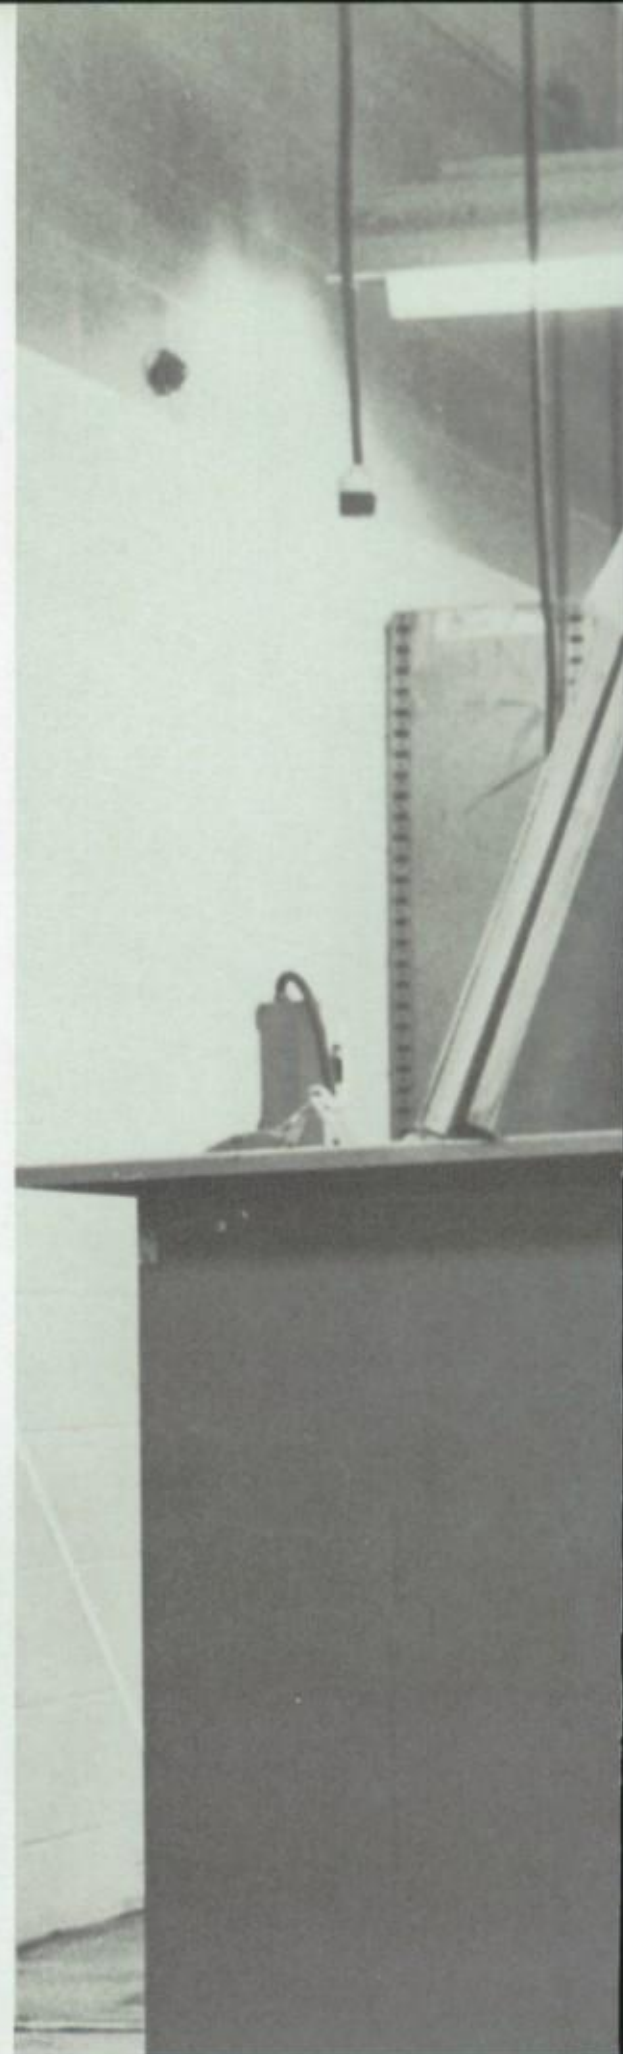

Over in the photo lab, the odor was one of chemicals as students learned how to process film and refine photographic techniques. The smell of pencils and paper dominated the drafting room where future architects drew blueprints for garages and underground nuclear waste security facilities.

The drinking fountain was a popular place in the wood and metal shops, supplying the H₂O essential to clear students' throats from the sawdust. The ink blotches on the hallway floor led to the print shop where students printed guides, notepads, and programs for school activities.

These courses were a step beyond the normal second and third floor classrooms. It was one place where students could step out of the school and into another dimension, a dimension known by most as the practical arts zone.

THE TASTE OF PRACTICAL ARTS

Once upon a time, down in the hole of our quiet high school, there lurked an ambitious guy named Pete Sullin. Active in printing and woodshop, Pete plans on being a printer.

Pete also has his own band, Eric Floyd. He writes many of the songs the band plays with the cooperation of other band members.

Whether it's a finely crafted table, a creatively printed pad of paper, or great music, Pete's talents seem to go on and on.

Imagine this!

"More white paper!" exclaimed Lisa Drozdowski during second period art class. Art was just one of the fine arts classes offered. There were four levels: Art I for beginners; Art II, a craft class; and Art III & IV for advanced students. Freshman Michelle Maciejewski commented, "Imagination and creativity are needed to do a good job in art class."

Drama classes did everything from writing plays to radio shows to performing plays at elementary schools. Denise Koncelik said, "It's a fun-filled class." Connie Ratka added, "Performing plays and dances helped me to be more confident when performing in front of a class." Drama teacher Mr. Surace commented, "A play is like the seventh game of the World Series and the Super Bowl all wrapped into one."

Photography focused on how the camera works and the shooting, developing, and printing of black and white and color film.

THE TASTE OF ART

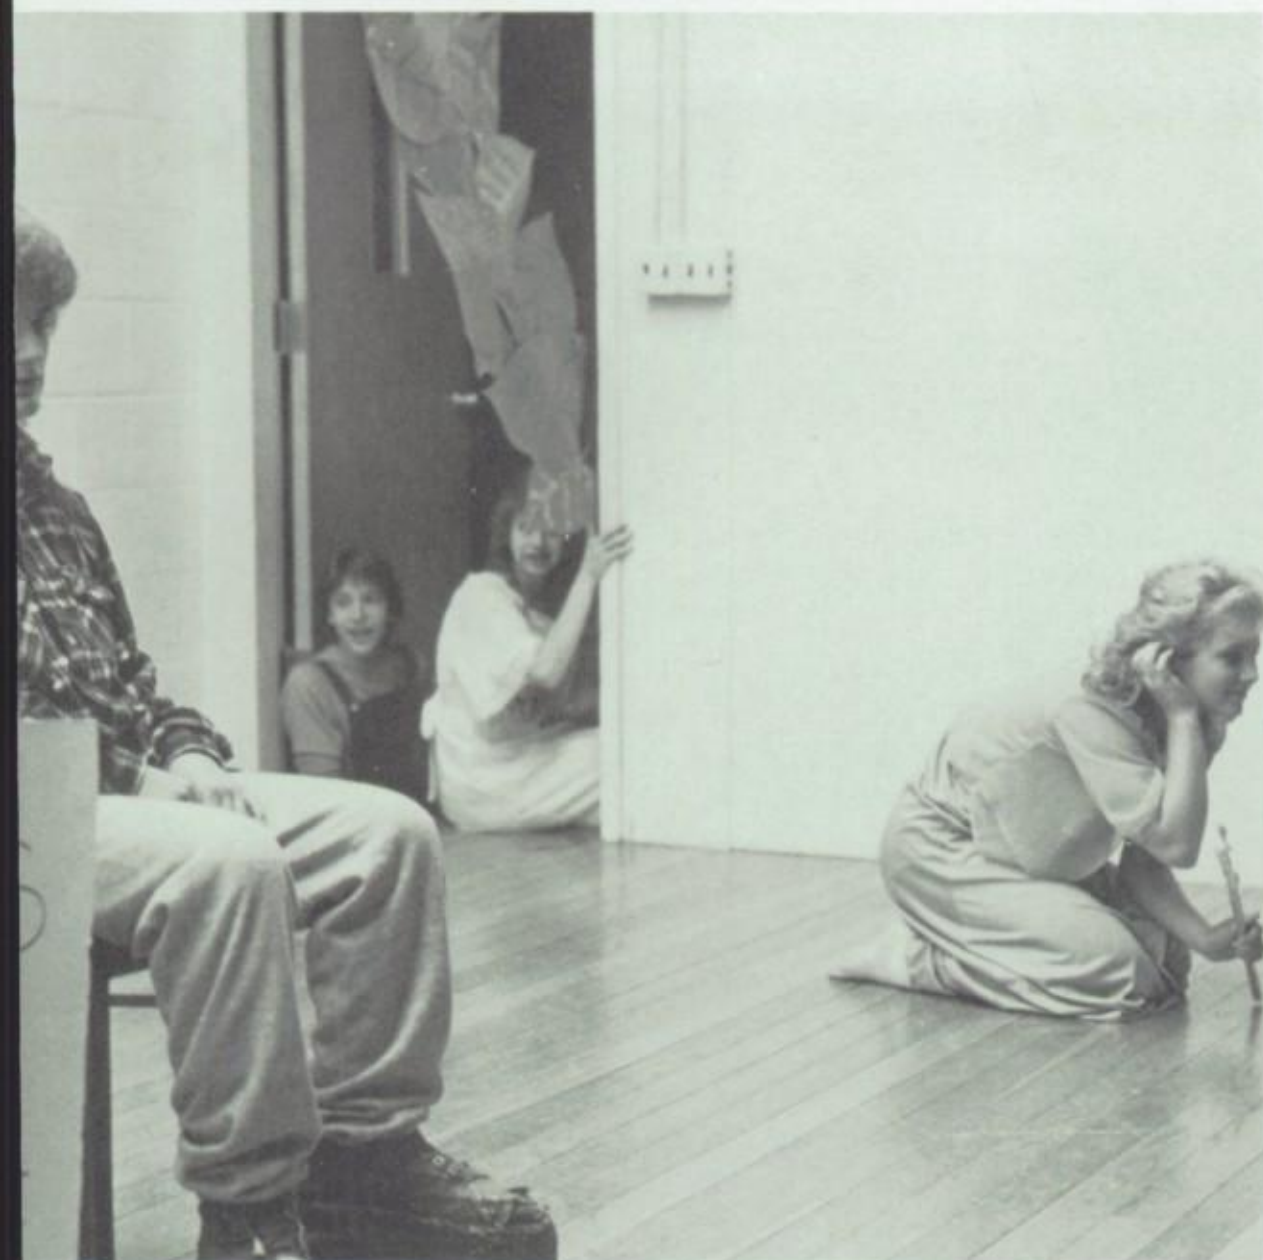

Talented and creative are two words to describe Tony Lutzo, a junior and an outstanding art student. He helped paint the murals in the gym. He did the Cleveland Heights painting himself.

Last summer Tony attended the Cleveland Institute of Art. He especially liked working with watercolors. Tony's plans for the future are a continuing study in the field of art.

Check it out

The school library was more than just a place to grab a book for a last-minute report.

Freshmen went to the library in the first couple weeks of school for Mrs. Lipinski the librarian to teach them how to use the card catalogue, readers guide, and how to take things out of the library, whether a book, magazine, or pamphlet. After freshman year, students moved into research papers, term papers, and various other projects.

Being a library page was fun, but it was also a job. Pages took attendance, made sure books were cared for (such as broken binding), and attended to their assigned sections.

Another group that helped students with their learning was the audio visual assistants managed by Mr. Sledz. Mike Flis, Mark Rankin, and Barb Sledz were his helpers. They helped distribute and maintain equipment. Video equipment was used more than ever this year. Computer classes used video cassette recorders to view a mini series introducing computers and how to use them. Journalism students videotaped their own news broadcasts, and citizenship classes watched films to help them reach the goals of their class.

-Mary Sutyak

THE TASTE OF THE LIBRARY

Terri Vyskocil, treasurer of the library pages, enjoyed school and said, "It can be a lot of fun if you get involved in different clubs and activities." This was one thing Terri accomplished and did well at.

She worked in the library for two years. "Working in the library was a good experience because it taught me how the library works."

Terri was also Bloodmobile chairperson this year. She worked hard to get everything together with Mrs. Daugherty the advisor. Terri enjoyed all of the activities she was in, including NHS, Spanish Club, and others.

Terri chose as her flavor vanilla because she mixes well with other people.

SPORTS

What's a high school without sports? Garfield wouldn't understand that question because it didn't matter what season it was, there were several sports to satisfy everyone's appetite.

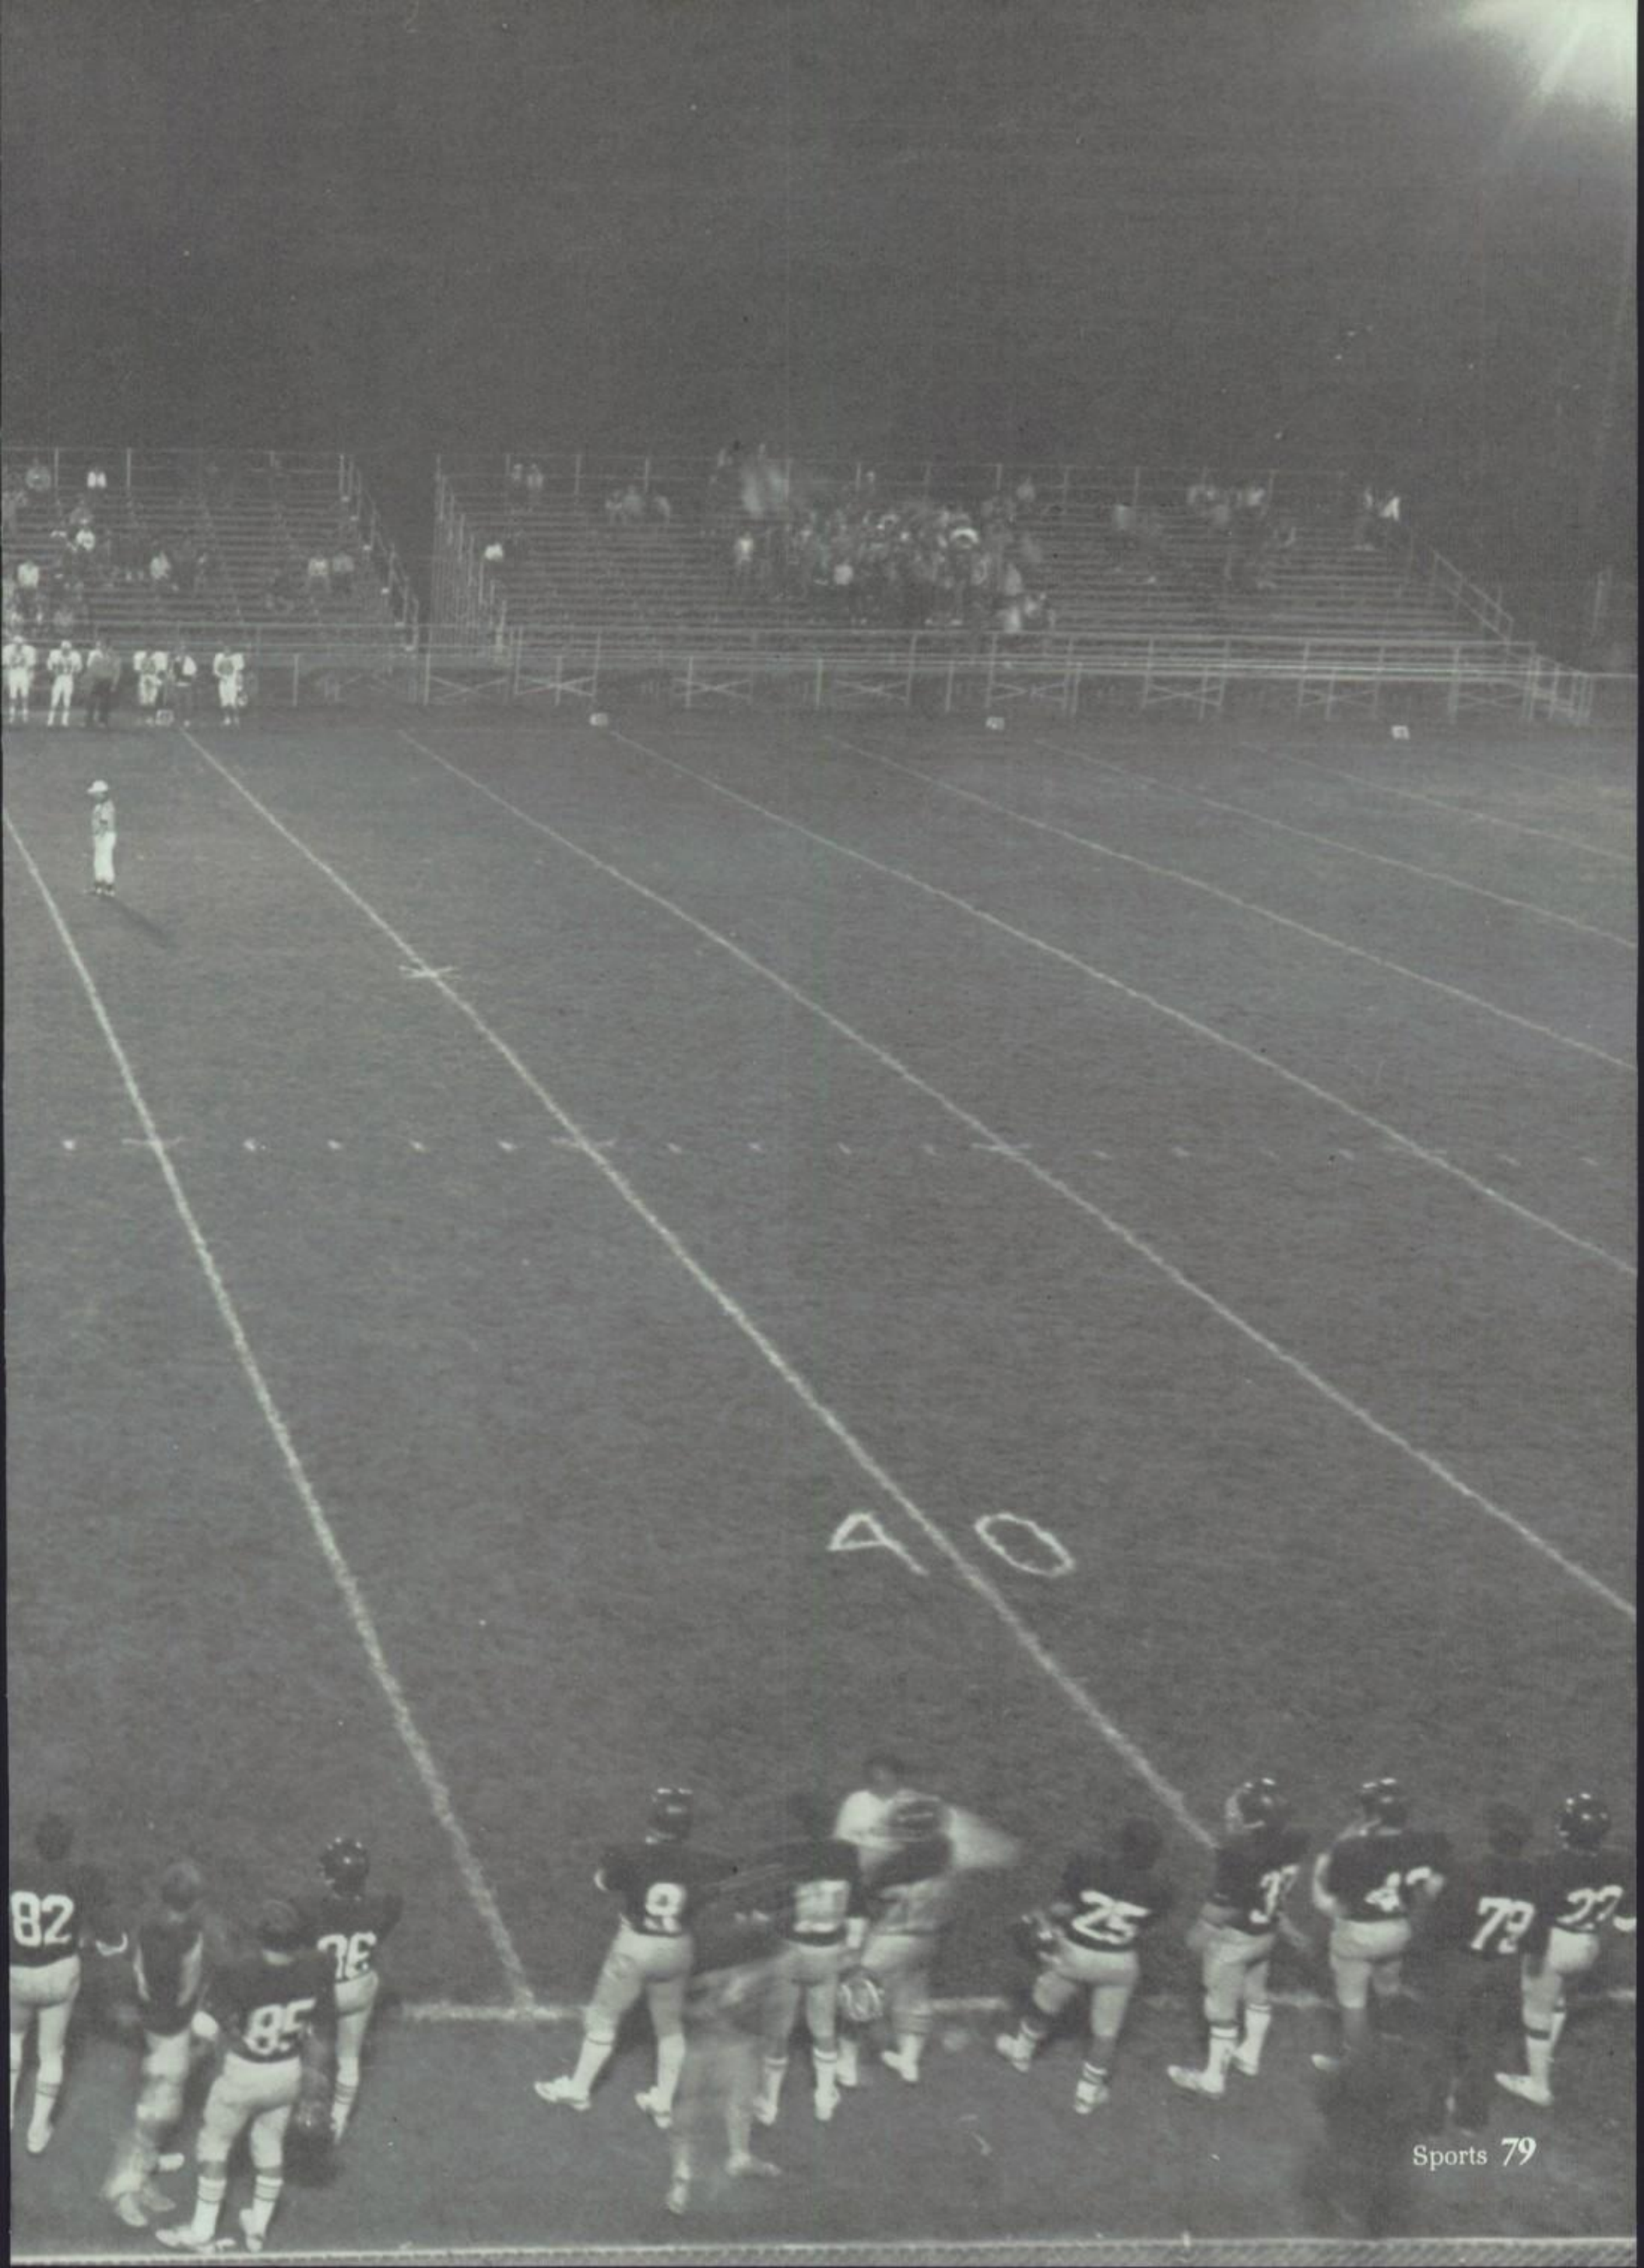

Football and volleyball were only two flavors featured in the fall, with basketball and hockey right around the corner. Spring fever brought baseball and softball with it, still more flavors to choose from. Sports added spice to the life of players and loyal fans.

Not only did the athletes play, but many students watched as Garfield Heights spent the year looking for a hero. Whether it was the success of teams in volleyball and bowling or of individuals giving outstanding performances, Garfield came across more than one hero this year.

The bitter taste of defeat, the sweet taste of victory: Garfield athletes tasted them both.

Bulldog pride made a comeback this year

Coming off a winless record last year, the Bulldogs were hungry for victories in 1984. Although the team consisted largely of juniors, it had a backbone of returning lettermen. After achieving three scrimmage victories, beating Maple Heights in the first home game at Blaugrund Field August 31 was a feather in the Bulldogs' caps. The following weeks were harsh, though, as the Dawgs dropped their next three contests to Brookfield, Bedford, and Shaw by slim margins.

During the second half of the season, the Bulldogs accomplished two more victories while surrendering four defeats, including a heartbreaker to Parma on Homecoming night. "This was probably our worst defeat," said running back Greg Augustine. "Homecoming is always the biggest game of the season for us and the fans."

A come-from-behind thriller at Byers Field gave Garfield a big win over Valley Forge when Kevin Rawlins caught a touchdown pass from halfback Roy Owens in the closing seconds. But the only other LEL victory came against Normandy, giving the Bulldogs a 2-5 league mark.

Post-season honors were received by several players. Nose guard James "Ring-a-Ding" Ringfield, linebacker Owens, and tight end Scott Asche were all chosen to the all-LEL team, while Ed Husek, Rawlins, and Augustine received honorable mentions. Asche was the team's MVP.

The junior varsity and freshmen had rough years, though both teams worked well together and improved as the season progressed.

BOYS BASKETBALL

Bulldogs battled the odds in a long season

It was the year of Murphy's Law for Bulldog basketball. Just about everything that could go wrong did.

It was a year when the Lake Erie League produced five outstanding teams, when Garfield's traditional independent opponents fielded some of the top teams in northern Ohio, and when the tallest guys in Garfield Heights looked like midgets compared to the trees of Valley Forge, Shaw, and Lakewood. And if that wasn't enough, fate was cruel enough to throw in a fourth quarter heartbreaker against Parma, a last second desperation shot loss to Shaker, and a deprivation of Garfield's heroic upset bid against first-place Valley Forge.

After hitting a mid-season low in losses to Trinity and Normandy, the varsity rebounded to play much better ball, especially in a well-executed slowdown game against Forge. Their first victory came in a 52-51 thriller at Parma, but Shaker Heights spoiled Garfield's attempt to win two in a row when a shot at the buzzer gave the Raiders a 58-56 victory. But a couple weeks later the Bulldogs put together their best game of the season when they beat Normandy, 58-56.

Senior Scott Asche was one of the top scorers in the LEL, and strong performances were also turned in by senior Mark D'Agostino and junior David Armstrong.

The junior varsity opened the season with a promising win against Bedford, but the rest of the year was frustrating. An overtime loss at Trinity was the season's biggest disappointment, especially after the Bulldogs had overcome an 11-point fourth quarter deficit to tie the game in regulation time.

The freshmen had a good season, falling one game short of the .500 mark.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

Dedication, hard work, and lots of practice filled the season for the Lady Bulldogs Dribble! Dribble! Dribble! The Lady Bulldog varsity and JV teams added several victories to their record this year.

Individual performances as well as team effort brought about success for the girls. Said Coach Borgio, "It takes a very special person to keep trying and hustling against great odds. I felt I had ten very special varsity players."

Senior co-captain Lisa McAloney attributed the success and high spirits to "the awesome abilities of Rhonda Crayton." Lisa had an optimistic outlook for next year's teams.

The junior varsity was noted for its ability, agility, and capability to hold on to the ball. "We practiced every night for about two hours," explained freshman Karrie Kidwell. "The more dedication we have and the more hard work, the better team we'll have."

The future looked bright for Lady Bulldog basketball. The JV's had an outstanding defense, and there was a lot of young talent on the JV and freshman teams.

Garfield's "Big Blue Machine" played a tough season, winning the title as Blue Division champions.

The team consisted of 21 hardworking guys who kept pushing for success. Seniors Mike Lange and Tom Clark and junior Rick Whewell were tri-captains. Whewell was the top scorer with Brian Nenadal in second and Joe Zidlicky right behind.

The Bulldogs were blessed with an outstanding goalie, Ron "The Wall" Koty. The team gave Ron a lot of credit because without him, the team would have had it a lot harder.

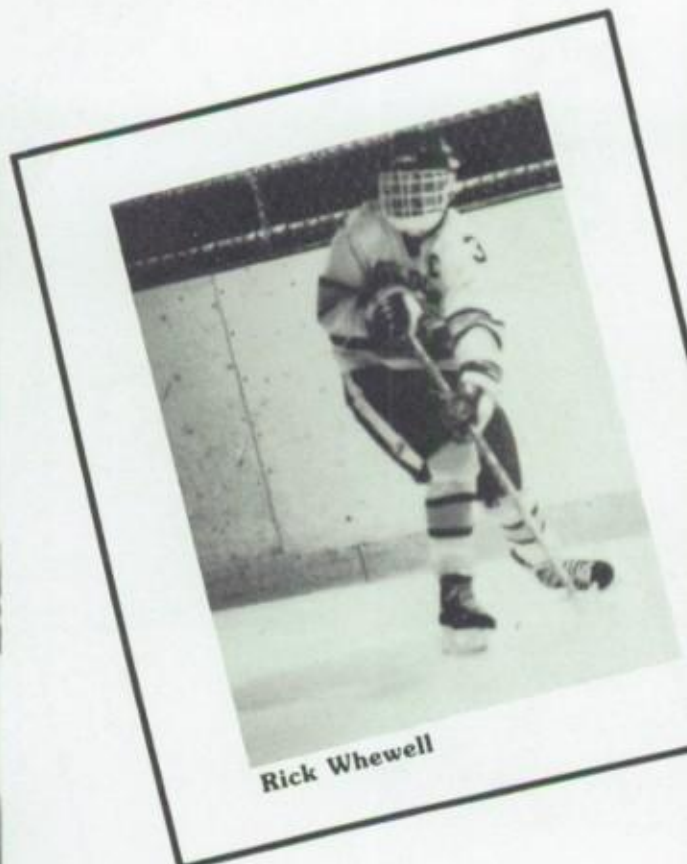

"We've made lots of progress since last year by winning our division," said Billy Blume, "but we still have a young team, only losing three starting seniors. I feel the best is yet to come."

The icers were coached by Mr. Gaillard and Mr. Olsko. "This year we were better than ever," stated Mr. Olsko, "and next year we will definitely be ready for the white division." Garfield played four teams in the white division this year and beat them all.

The Bulldogs placed second in the Euclid tournament, and they won second place in the Rocket Invitational at Winterhurst.

The championship came down to the final game, but Garfield crushed Parma, 10-0, to capture the division crown.

VOLLEYBALL

Best season in Garfield history ended too soon

Packing away the volleyball equipment wasn't an easy thing to do. The Lady Bulldogs had made it to the district tournament after being sectional champions, but many of the players still considered the season too short.

This was especially true of the seniors on the team who had played volleyball for three consecutive years. Said Kim Kucinich, "I miss it already," the day after the last game, and that summed up the feelings of the varsity team.

Both the varsity and junior varsity made improvements in their team play this season. The teams experienced better participation, communication, and overall teamwork during their games, and that showed.

One of the outstanding games played by the varsity was against Trinity in the sectionals because the Bulldogs made a killing. Another important win came against top-rated Shaker Heights. Karen Torgerson commented, "They had killed us in the first match. Then we came back to beat them."

As for junior varsity, their most exciting game was against Trinity due to the rivalry between the teams. Garfield defeated Trinity because the JV's played their positions well. "We had an enjoyable year," commented JV coach Ms. Buckley. "We improved with each game."

Varsity coach Mr. Arnold was pleased. "We defeated a lot of teams never before beaten in the history of Garfield Heights volleyball."

BASEBALL

Varsity struggled through dismal season, but young JV squad showed promise for future

"A little more determination and hard work would have given the season a better outcome," commented outfielder Mark D'Agostino.

Due to a lack of determination, the varsity Bulldogs had a record of 4-13 overall and 4-9 in the LEL for the spring of 1984. Of the four wins, Joe Gabriele pitched three and had the only save. For this reason Gabriele was named MVP and to the all-LEL team, while Gary Vidovic led in home runs. "We had the talent but didn't have the ability to live up to it," said Bill Janiak.

"I'm number 8! For the fans, I'm number one in their hearts." Those were the words of Nick Labella, the JV baseball MVP for his outstanding defense on third base. The JV season was highlighted by strong pitching by Roy Owens and a spirited team with Gary Gregg as a strong relief pitcher. The starting infield included first baseman Chris Wilk, second baseman John Becker, John Perkins at shortstop, and Labella at third. Not only was teamwork a key factor, but catcher and captain Harry Corsi played a big part in the team's success. The JV's ended their season with a record of 8-6.

Mr. Mather coached the varsity and Mr. Atkinson the JV's. Lisa McAloney and Lynn Bosch enjoyed their jobs as team managers. One of their duties was to keep score for each game. "This wasn't very difficult, until I was given six different opinions on how to score a play," commented Lisa.

Varsity and JV baseball was one sport that took a lot of dedication. Players did not get recognized at an assembly, and many games were cancelled and rescheduled due to rain. The coaches and players both were looking forward to this spring's season and an improved record over last year.

SOFTBALL

Cupcakes inspired rookie team to 5 victories

"Get those cupcakes!" was heard practically every day in homerooms around Garfield last spring. This expression was used to acknowledge the star softball player of each game. And yes, the players actually did receive cupcakes for their great play.

Garfield had only one senior on the team, and several of the underclassmen were rookies. Many of the players had to switch from their summer slow pitch to fast pitch, which was very hard.

There were a number of outstanding players recognized by the coach and other LEL teams. One such player was Traci Gallagher. "It was an honor to be chosen MVP of my team, but it was more of an honor to be recognized by other coaches as an outstanding player in the LEL."

Amy Rawlins, who did a good job as an outfielder, commented, "If it weren't for those golden cupcakes, we probably wouldn't have made it through the season."

Garfield finished with a season record of 5-8.

Dreams finally came true as Garfield posted 6 victories for most successful season ever

"After years of practice we finally put together a solid team that brought respect to Garfield Heights soccer," said MVP Dave Latarski. The soccer team worked extremely hard this past season to make its dream come true—and did it ever come true!

The dream came true when they broke the record for most wins in a season, which was five. Their record for the year was 6-9-2. Senior Dave Schrader tied the record for most goals in a season with 11. Nick Labella broke the JV record for most goals with 10, four of which came against Berea. "We had a good season," said Labella of the JV's, "even though we had no substitutes throughout all our games."

When Chris Wilk suffered a leg injury early in the season, the team was left without a goalie. Senior Mike Domek came shining through as he quickly picked up the skills needed for a successful goalie. "The feeling is great," he said, "but I owe most of the credit to the offense for scoring as much as they did. Also, the defense played very well and helped greatly in the first victory." Coach Bob Whitelock broke the record for most wins by a Garfield soccer coach, too.

WRESTLING

Bulldogs had long, grueling season

Most people think of wrestling as just another winter sport. But for the guys of the wrestling team, it was "the" winter sport.

At the close of November a group of tough students got together to sweat and get in shape for the season. As the guys got in shape, so did the coaches. Mr. Arnold, Mr. Minor, and newcomer Mr. Carson sharpened their skills, went over their notes, and got their voices in shape for the many hair-raising matches to come.

Soon it was time to step out onto the mats and get down to business. From the lightweights to heavy, everyone worked to reach the goal of perfection. Pre-season tournaments got the guys ready for the season and also brought them some early victories. Reese Lewis, Brian Svab, Ed Honigman, Dan Tiffe, and Matt Bari all placed at a variety of tournaments.

The season opened and brought a frown to the face of the Bulldog. Garfield lost its first matches, often giving up 18 points before the match started. Throughout the season Garfield could rely on a few consistent victories among the weight classes.

The JV team, lacking many weight classes, pulled out victories here and there. Showing a good wrestling future, the freshmen, some of whom moved up to JV and varsity positions, used their skills to overpower opponents and win.

GOLF & BOWLING

Varsity bowlers won Greater Cleveland championship

The varsity bowling team won the division scratch championship. Toni Ferrante stated that bowling is "one of the most challenging sports. Each person's score affects how the team does. Consistency and dependability are the keys."

Coach Hargett was very proud of the ten guys and two young ladies. "We won a lot of close games. We have clutch bowlers on our team; some games we won by ten pins or less." Finishing with the highest average of 202, senior MVP Frank Wasinski summed up the season by saying, "The varsity bowling team has a consistency for winning. This year was the year of the super bowlers." Younger brother Robbie Wasinski's outlook is bright: "In a few years we'll have another super team."

The varsity golf team finished its season with six victories and 16 losses. Individually Carmen Lubrano finished with the best overall average of 42. The most improved players were Scott Panko and B.J. Siko.

Coach Krueger commented, "We need to improve both individually and collectively. The potential for a very strong team is there. It all comes down to how much each person is willing to work on his weaknesses to strengthen his overall game."

TRACK & CROSS COUNTRY

Budzowski first to reach regionals in 20 years

"Faster! Move it out! Let's go!" Those were familiar cries heard during track and cross country practice. After a slow start, the track team picked up the pace last spring. Rodney Budzowski uplifted team spirit by breaking the high jump record with a jump of 6'3. Between leaping hurdles, competing in the long jump, throwing the shot put, and of course being in the high jump, Rodney found time to comment on his record. "I knew I could do it, but I had to wait for the right time." At the district meet, Rodney placed first in the high jump.

He was the first Garfield track member to go to regional competition in over 20 years. Not only was he named MVP but also the LEL's outstanding high jumper.

This year's cross country team was coached by Mr. McNulty. "Only those runners who have paid the price during the off season deserve to win and usually do," commented the coach. "Next year's season depends upon what you do during the year." The boys team consisted of many good runners. John Rozmarynowski set the freshman record at 19:10. Team captain Tom Barnett was MVP.

On the girls side, only two runners stuck out the season, causing Garfield a number of forfeits. Jeanette Glinski and Lisa Pines ran well but commented, "We need more girls; we can't do it by ourselves."

Conditioning, endurance, and hard work were the ingredients for success in both of these sports. With many participants in both track and cross country returning for another season, the coaches had a positive outlook on the future.

INTRAMURALS & GYM

Weightlifting got students out of bed early

Sound off! One, two, three, four... make your body work! This wasn't only the song played before varsity basketball games; it was also the theme of the intramural and physical education programs.

When most students were still cuddled under the covers on those cold winter mornings, a handful of dedicated weightlifters were already at school, closeted away in the weight room, conditioning and toning their muscles. Under the supervision of Mr. Minor, the group, including four girls, worked with bench press, free weights, and leg extension every morning from 6:45 to 8:00. The work was hard but well worth it when participants felt the impact of fitness in their lives.

Besides the two seasons of weightlifting, intramural programs included bowling, which was held weekly at Garfield Lanes, and volleyball.

While intramurals were voluntary, all underclassmen were required to take phys ed as part of the regular curriculum. Football, basketball, softball, and volleyball were only part of the story. Students were also treated to the finer points of tumbling, golf, archery, bowling, and even "ultimate frisbee."

PEOPLE

Changing class at Garfield Heights High: bewildered freshmen searching for the lost classroom... casual sophomores walking in step with the rest of the crowd... confident juniors listening to the latest gossip about who's dating whom... rowdie seniors terrorizing the once quiet halls... Mr. Sledz shouting "One more minute!" to all the loitering third floor students... Mr. Rose hurrying students to their destinations... steady couples strolling hand in hand... girls racing out of the restroom with only seconds to spare. The bell rings, leaving not a single soul wandering the halls.

No one can dispute it: people were the flavors of Garfield.

Ideal seniors

Early in 1985, just after seniors had returned from their last Christmas vacation, the reality of graduation began to sink in. For one day as they walked into English class, their teachers announced it was time to vote for "Ideal Seniors" and handed out the ballots.

The Class of '85 cast their votes, and the results are pictured on these pages and on pages 108-109.

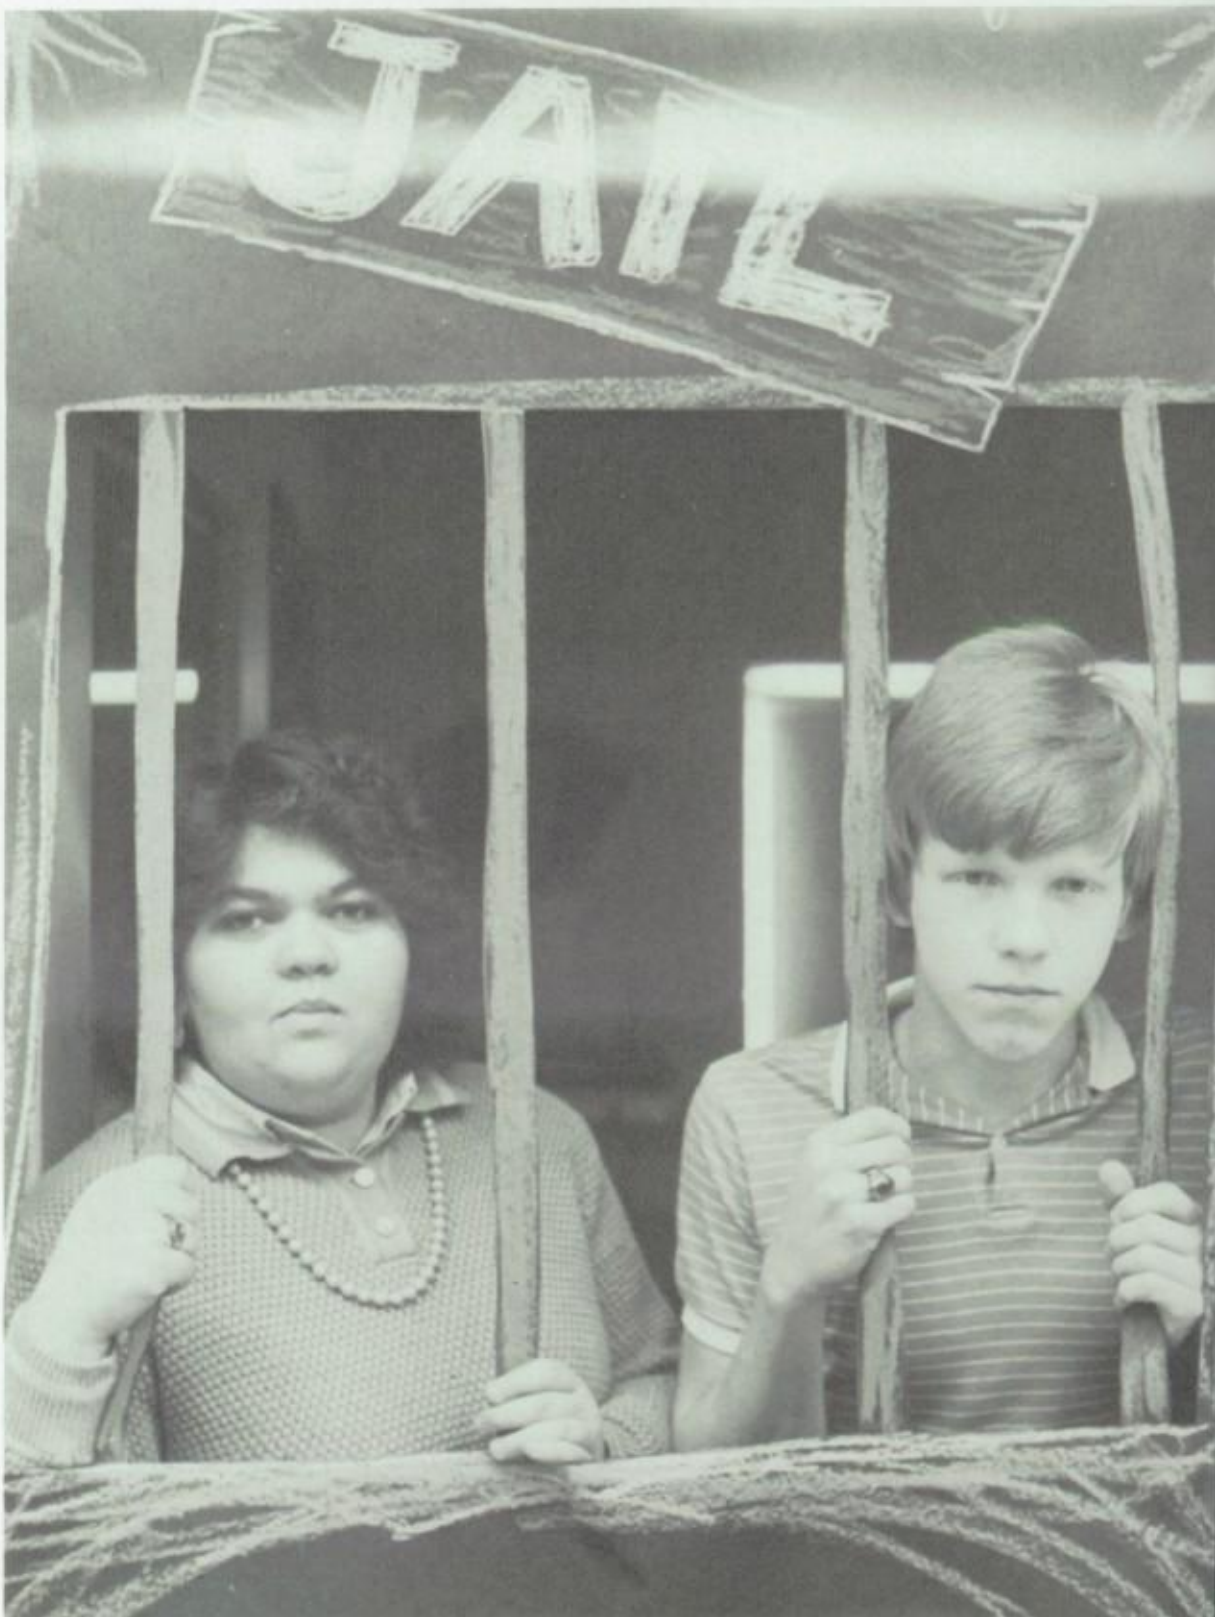

"Ideal Seniors" appeared in the yearbook for many years until a few years ago when the tradition was stopped. But the uproar and outrage was so great, that in 1982 "Ideal Seniors" returned—and the tradition lives on with the Class of '85.

Seniors, come alive in '85! That's what the senior class officers tried to do this year. With the help of advisor Ms. Wrona, the officers planned to keep people involved.

The senior class pulled through and made it a great year.

This year's officers were Joe Lasher, Karen Torgerson, Patty Bellomo, and Janel Ciricola.

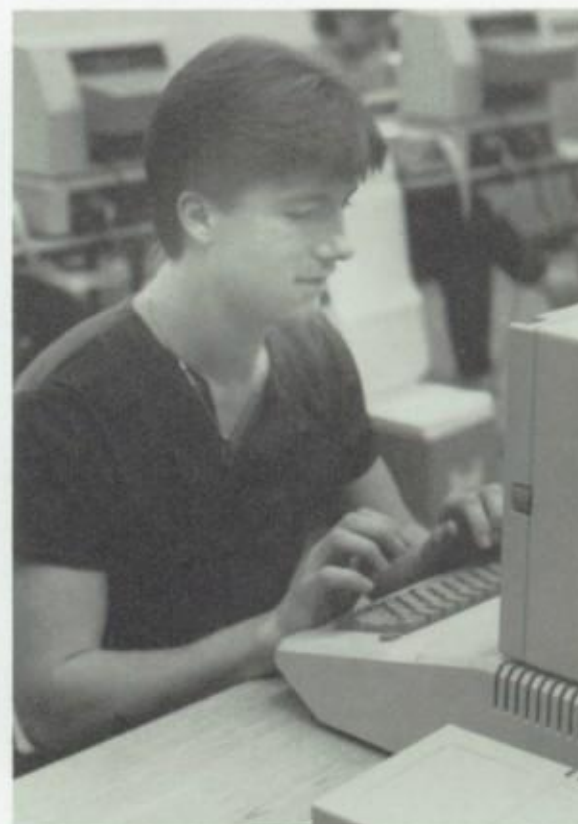

The senior class had many fund raisers. They had the traditional candy and bake sales as they always do. But they also had mugs, key chains, and T-shirt sales along with car washes, flea market concessions, and the dunking booth at the jubilee. Activities ranged from the senior dance to a canoe trip.

Even though seniors' spirits were dampened at the beginning of the year when they found out they wouldn't be dismissed a week early, everyone ended up having a good time. With the officers' help, the senior class pulled through and made it a great year.

What will you do when you get out of school? Many seniors don't know, but Ed Husek has already decided. He's going into the Army.

Ed began preparing for this career with a two-month basic training course last summer at Fort Dix, New Jersey. His next step will be a three-month advanced training program in truck mechanics this summer in Maryland. After that, Ed said, "I'll serve one weekend a month for the next six years working on trucks at a Ravenna base."

Ed thinks, "There's a good chance I might pursue a military career." His father was in the Army for ten years, part of the time in the Korean War.

Ed was also active in school. He was a defensive tackle on the varsity football team, and he was rewarded for his six years of football experience by being selected captain of the team. He has also participated in track for four years, competing in shot, discus, and the half-mile.

Trig and analytic geometry were Ed's favorite classes. "I was always in with math." Ed may pursue his math education with the money he earns in the reserves.

Ed describes himself as "strawberry, because I'm nice and sweet, and it's my favorite flavor."

"Come on, push a little harder, you're almost there!" Those were the words of Mr. Minor helping senior Bob Gruszewski during a weightlifting session.

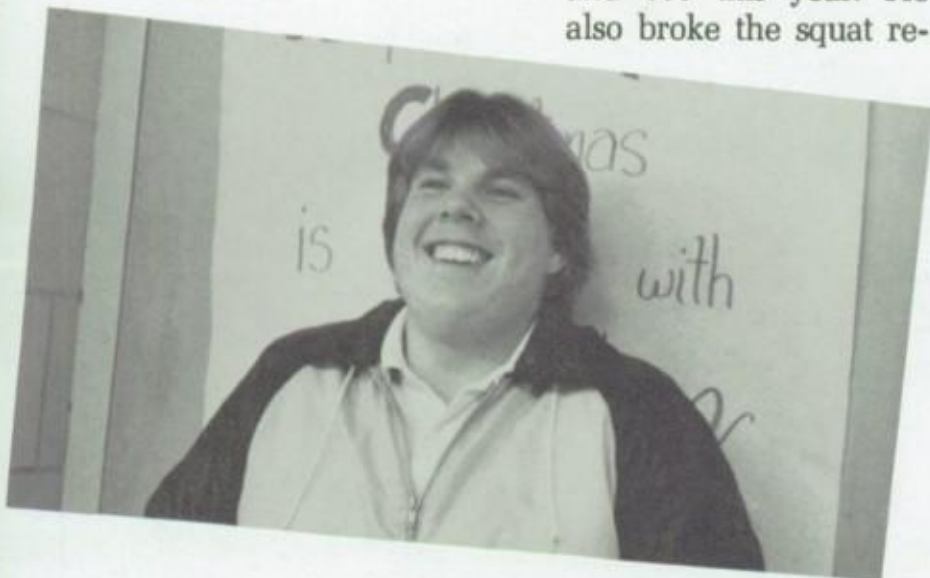

Bob enjoyed weightlifting and has been doing it for a long time. He has broken a few records in the weight room. The first record was held by Brian Dlugo who bench-pressed 270; Bob benched 305 last year and 330 this year. He also broke the squat record by beating Mike Ruggiero's 410 by lifting 450.

Bob went to JVS for industrial electricity and was president of student council there. The only thing Bob disliked about school was, "It started too early in the morning. Otherwise, it's okay."

Outside of school he worked with his dad contracting. Bob says his flavor is cherry because that's his favorite fruit.

There are many words to describe Doug Schrader: witty, intelligent, dynamic. Doug's future plans are to study engineering in the field of robotics at Ohio State or the University of Cincinnati.

"I enjoyed the friendly atmosphere at Garfield," Doug reflected. "Everyone got along well. The faculty was very helpful. The green color on the walls was odd. I wish they would have served Spam, Cheez Whiz, and zucchini in the cafeteria."

Other than school, Doug enjoyed playing varsity baseball and intramurals. He worked at Pizza Bazaar. Doug enjoys collecting Genesis albums and memorabilia.

Doug has three sisters and a twin brother, Dave. When asked about his extraordinary twin clone, Doug commented, "He is very good for me."

His favorite flavor isn't mint chocolate chip or fudge marble, but water. That's right! As Doug says, "It is good in my tummy and when it runs down my chin, it makes me happy."

Scott Kormos was one senior who had a lot of musical talent. Most people only know how to play music, but Scott can also write, produce, engineer, and sing it. He is trying hard to reach his goal, which is a career in music.

Scott used to play in copy bands but does his own songs now. "As a matter of fact, I wrote a song about a special girl from this school," he said. "She inspired it and I wrote it. It's one of my best songs."

Music wasn't Scott's only interest. He enjoyed outdoor activities like skiing. He said he enjoyed school because, "I like being around people, and you learn and grow with your peers."

The only unusual thing Scott says he does is that he wears two different color socks.

Here is an interesting one for you. Senior Steve Usher was not a common flavor found at Garfield; he stood out in the bunch.

Steve's favorite class was lunch. "I can sit back, relax, and talk to my friends," he said. He also liked lunch because it was the only class he could not get a deficiency in.

Steve also enjoyed coming to school because he looked forward to annoying his teachers. His favorite teacher was Mr.

Jambor because he had a good sense of humor and made class fun. Like several other students, Steve hated homework. "It took up too much of my free time," he said.

Steve was involved in football on the varsity team in 1983. He also held a part-time job.

Steve has a couple of hobbies which are out of the ordinary. He enjoys cave exploration. He also tries to hurdle tall buildings with a single bound. If all else fails and as a last resort, he can be found in the heart of Cleveland climbing the Terminal Tower.

Steve said the flavor that describes him best is cherry. "It tastes good," he said.

From the pages of the Leader to the Scarlet and Gray of Ohio State, Claude Barclay has been working to make a dream come true. He worked hard in school and enjoyed extra activities. He was in A'Cappella choir for three years and Mixed Ensemble for two.

Outside of school Claude worked for the Leader. He reported on all of the happenings of the school's sports teams.

Claude's future plans are to either go to Ohio State and be in their show choir, the Scarlet and Gray, or to go on to a business college, where he wishes to go into accounting.

Claude's flavor would have to be Grape Kool-Aid. He drinks it all the time. He said grape describes him because, "I've always been partial to purples."

Visiting another country is exciting and Yuka Nishiyama, an exchange student at Garfield Heights High, thought so, too.

Yuka came from Japan to experience academics in the United States. When she first arrived at Garfield, Yuka was impressed by the friendliness of the students. She thought the language barrier wasn't as hard as she expected it to be. Yuka enjoyed the teachers of American Studies, biology, band, and other classes. However, just like other students, Yuka didn't like the large amounts of homework she was assigned. Sometimes reading English was difficult.

As for activities, Yuka was a member of the marching band which she enjoyed very much. Yuka loved to go shopping, roller skating, and to see movies. Also, she liked to play her clarinet and practice the keyboard for jazz band.

Yuka did origami, or paper folding, in her spare time. Though it is common in Japan, she made various objects out of paper.

When asked her flavor, she answered orange. "It is because sometimes I can be sweet, and sometimes I can be sour."

fund raisers such as car washes, bake sales, and candy sales. The junior class also sold magazines. Junior advisor Mr. Schroeder commented, "I felt the officers needed more support in order for the class to succeed and reach its goals."

Besides being class officers, these students had many other interests inside and outside of school. Randy enjoyed playing football, basketball, and baseball. He also likes music. Denise enjoyed spending time with friends and participating in school activities such as Mixed Ensemble, plays, and A'Cappella Choir. She also likes to collect pictures of Abraham Lincoln.

Renee was in the marching band; she plays clarinet and saxophone. She was also one of the editors of the Mirror. "What I like most about school is being with my friends," she said. Sheila was a hockey stat and enjoyed swimming. All four officers were in Student Senate.

What could be more different than being described as "bananas?" A girl named Jocelyn Kelleher, that's who. She's very different.

Her most out-of-the-ordinary trait is dressing like a punker.

At sixteen years of age, Jocelyn says school is all right, and among all the teachers her favorites happen to be Mr. Hargett, Mr. Subotnik, and Mr. Geiser. How much more different can she be? Well, when asked what her hobbies are, Jocelyn said she likes just about every kind of music, going out with her friends, and dressing like a punk. "I have a bandana collection. Ha-ha-ha. About thirty different bandanas in almost every color," giggled Jocelyn. Her most "out-of-the ordinary" trait was dressing like a punk rocker. "I don't want to stand out in the crowd," she said. Jocelyn has two favorite people: one, the famous Adam Ant, and the other, believe it or not, Dave Spehar. She especially liked his hairstyle. She said, "He's almost as cool as I am. Ha-ha-ha." Her future plans are to join the Coast Guard. After that she wants to move to Alaska where it's nice and cool, get married, have two kids, a station wagon, and three puppy dogs.

The spotlight was on the best junior team of the year. Although they didn't have a coach, or didn't get any special recognition from the school, the team of Matt Bari and Jeff Rapiery certainly added to the flavor of good ole' Garfield High.

Being best friends only seemed natural for these wild and crazy guys. Sharing the same interests, such as participating in football and wrestling, they also had other things in common. For example, their vocabulary. It wasn't unusual for you to hear Matt call Jeff a Smungle Worf in a fit of anger, while Jeff's comeback might include a Wet Willie.

Describing their flavor is easy. It's very clear they resemble tutti frutti remarkably well. The hard part is, which one is tutti and which one is frutti? Even though this flavor might imply a little craziness, Matt and Jeff are really the best friends anyone could have.

Weekends were one aspect of their craziness. One may never be normal again after just one expedition with these two. It may be going for a bite to eat, seeing another Rocky Horror Show, or just dancing the night away. While Matt works on perfecting magic tricks, Jeff is writing or taking exotic pictures for the yearbook. Yet, their combination is deadly. Not many students are as crazy as these guys. Then again, no two guys go out of their way to make someone happy more than Matt and Jeff do. They were two juniors who added a wild and crazy flavor to Garfield.

Idol. But it's not Billy Idol; it's Dave Spehar.

Billy Idol is one of Dave's favorite singers, along with Thompson Twins and Prince. Besides listening to new wave music, he also liked to dress that way: parachute pants, leather bands around his wrists, and don't forget the spiked hair style.

Dave enjoys music very much. He was in Mixed Ensemble, A'Cappella Choir, and was the prince in the Yuletide Feast. Acting is another of Dave's talents; he was the male lead in this year's drama production and has been in past plays and musicals. He also played corner back for the football team. On top of all this, he has a wonderful young lady for a girlfriend, Lori Gorenc, whom he has been seeing for two years.

One might think with all the activities Dave participated in, his grades might not be all that good but they were. He was in honors classes and plans on attending college for architecture.

Inside Dave loves to make people laugh with him. He said it makes him feel good to know he's making someone happy.

Horses aren't the only thing on Kim's mind, though. In school she is an honor student and has many friends. On weekends you could see Kim at the movies or at the local fast food places.

"If I was a flavor," said Kim, "I guess I would be blue because blue represents quietness and sadness, and that basically describes me."

The word president can mean holding the responsibility of a lot of power. For Kelly Smith, this position in the sophomore class was fun, too.

"They worked very hard to do the very best they possibly could."

Along with her other officers—Carla Schillero, vice president; Kathi Mendek, secretary; and Charlene Harrah, treasurer—Kelly helped plan activities for the class of

'87.

Mr. Johnson, the class advisor, said, "They worked very hard to do the best they possibly could for their class." He enjoyed working with them.

"It took our class a while to get organized," commented Kelly, "but once we were, we could look forward to getting even more accomplished in the future." The sophomores did a lot to raise money this year, including a few bake sales and a car wash.

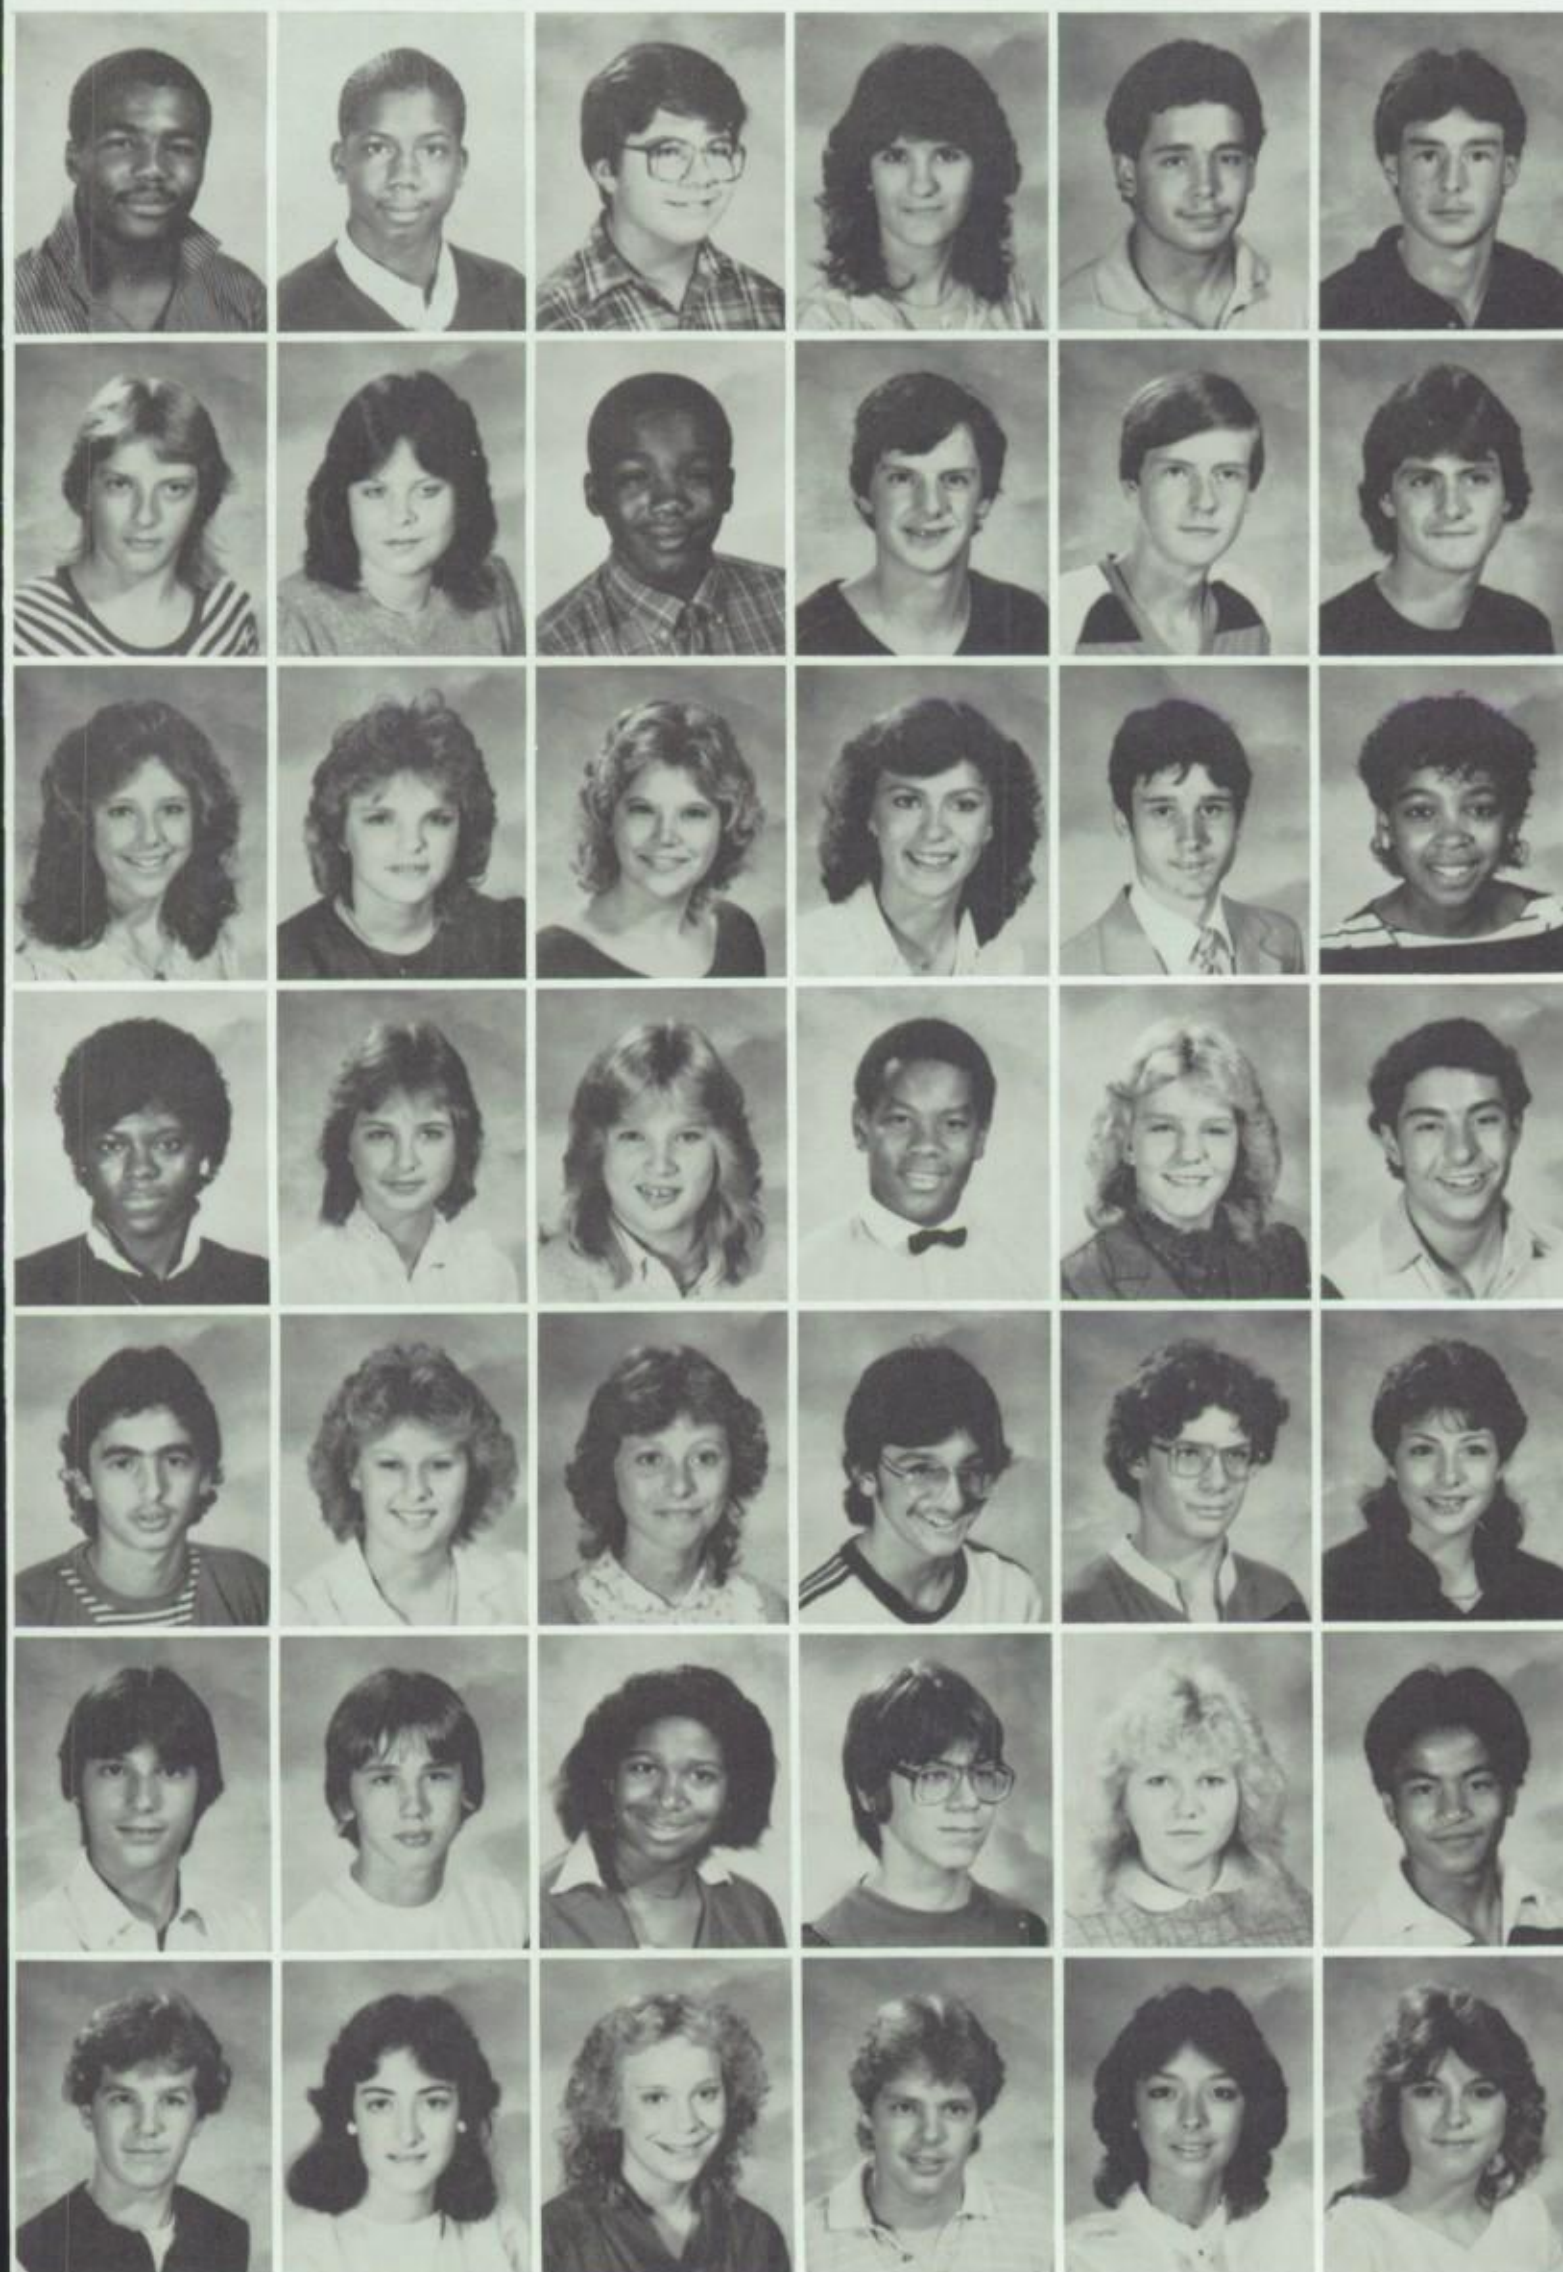

The main objective was to encourage class spirit. "I think we've done very well," said Kelly.

Getting ahead in the world is one thing Anand Sabapathy has already begun to do.

Anand's above average intelligence was noticed back in fifth grade. His teacher noticed that he was comprehending much faster than the rest of the students. She suggested he take an intelligence test. As a result, Anand advanced to the seventh grade with flying colors.

"I worried because I thought it would be too difficult for me to handle."

"I was really excited about meeting new people," he remembered, "but then I worried because I thought it would be too difficult for me to handle."

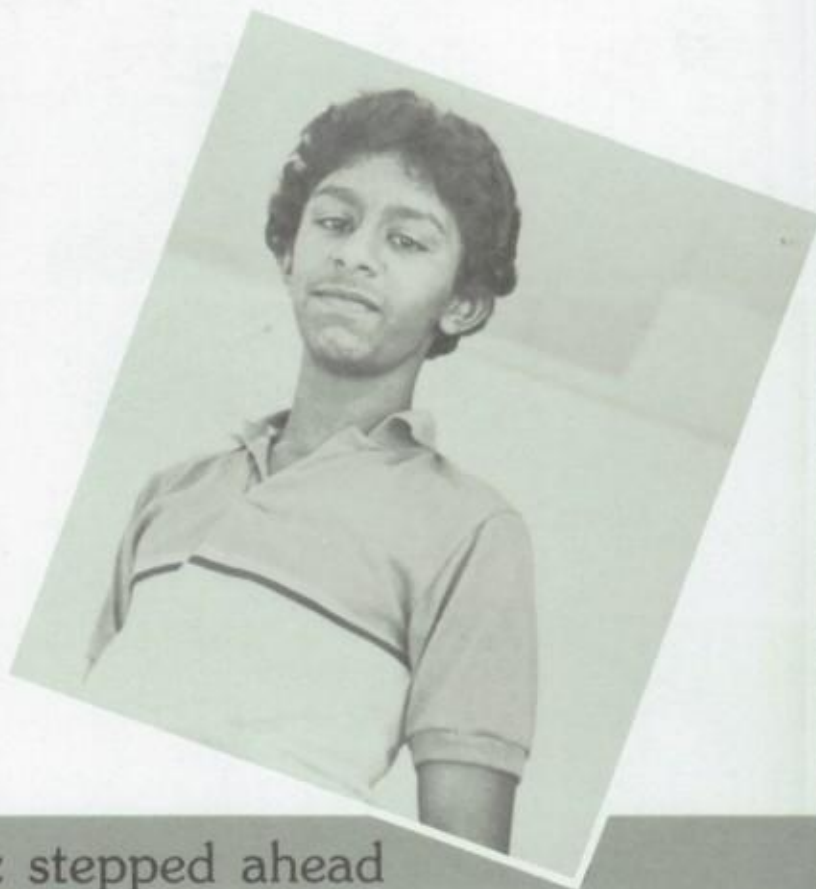

Anand's favorite classes were computers and geometry. "Computers are very useful and also entertaining. There is always something new to learn."

After he graduates, Anand would like to attend Ohio State and major in computers. His hobbies include fishing and hunting. During the summer Anand and his father go to Ladue, Ohio.

Aside from his various other activities, for the past two years Anand has wrestled for Garfield.

BOB WELCH: talented performer who loves being on stage and hopes to stay there.

Creative is one word that describes sophomore Bob Welch.

Bob was active in the theatrical side of Garfield. He was a member of Mixed Ensemble, A'Cappella Choir, Bobby enjoys the theater and hopes to major in it.

and was in the school play as Voltaire the director. He also gave much of his time to the Garfield Heights Little Theater production of "West Side Story." Bobby enjoys the theater and hopes to major in it at college.

"School is great and I enjoy it," said Bobby. This is probably because he enjoyed classes like Ensemble, English, and Geometry. He liked Geometry because Mr. Hartley made it easy to learn. Mr. Jambor was his favorite teacher, though. "Mr. Jambor is easy to get along with, and he makes you feel like a real person."

As for a flavor, Bobby said salt would describe him. This is because salt is bitter, and that's the way he can be, especially when playing a mean character in a play.

This is one student that may be a star of tomorrow.

Only a sophomore? That was the question asked by many when the name Bob Shubert popped into the conversation.

Bob's known by his algebra class as the "Human Calculator."

Bob's day consisted of several college-bound classes. Since he enjoys math, Algebra II and geometry took up two periods of the seven. He also took chemistry, where Mr. Caruso became his favorite teacher. Known by his fourth period Algebra II class as the "Human Calculator," Bob plans to go to college and major in computer science.

Besides school, Bob also enjoys extra curricular activities. Band, wrestling, football, and track occupied much of his spare time. Wrestling, which he started in third grade, is Bob's favorite. On weekends he traveled to tournaments to get experience and won third place in the Little Bulldog Tournament.

Collecting baseball cards was only one of his hobbies. To have extra cash, his paper route around the neighborhood came in handy. Bob finds it hard to keep up with all his activities, but he wouldn't have it any other way. For Bob Shubert, life is an assortment of flavors.

Four students were chosen to run the freshman class. With the help of their advisor Ms. Borgio, the freshman class had a big job in front of them.

This year the freshmen got involved in school

This year the freshmen officers included Karrie Kidwell, president; Amy Whewell, vice president; Beth Shay, treasurer; and Nancy Chmielewski, secretary. These students had a lot of problems to overcome. Ms. Borgio said that freshman year is the hardest because students don't know each other very well, which makes it hard to pick officers.

This year the freshmen got involved in school. They had a few bake sales and other activities to raise money. They also did a good job putting the Spirit Week hall up, considering they only had one week to get an idea and set things up.

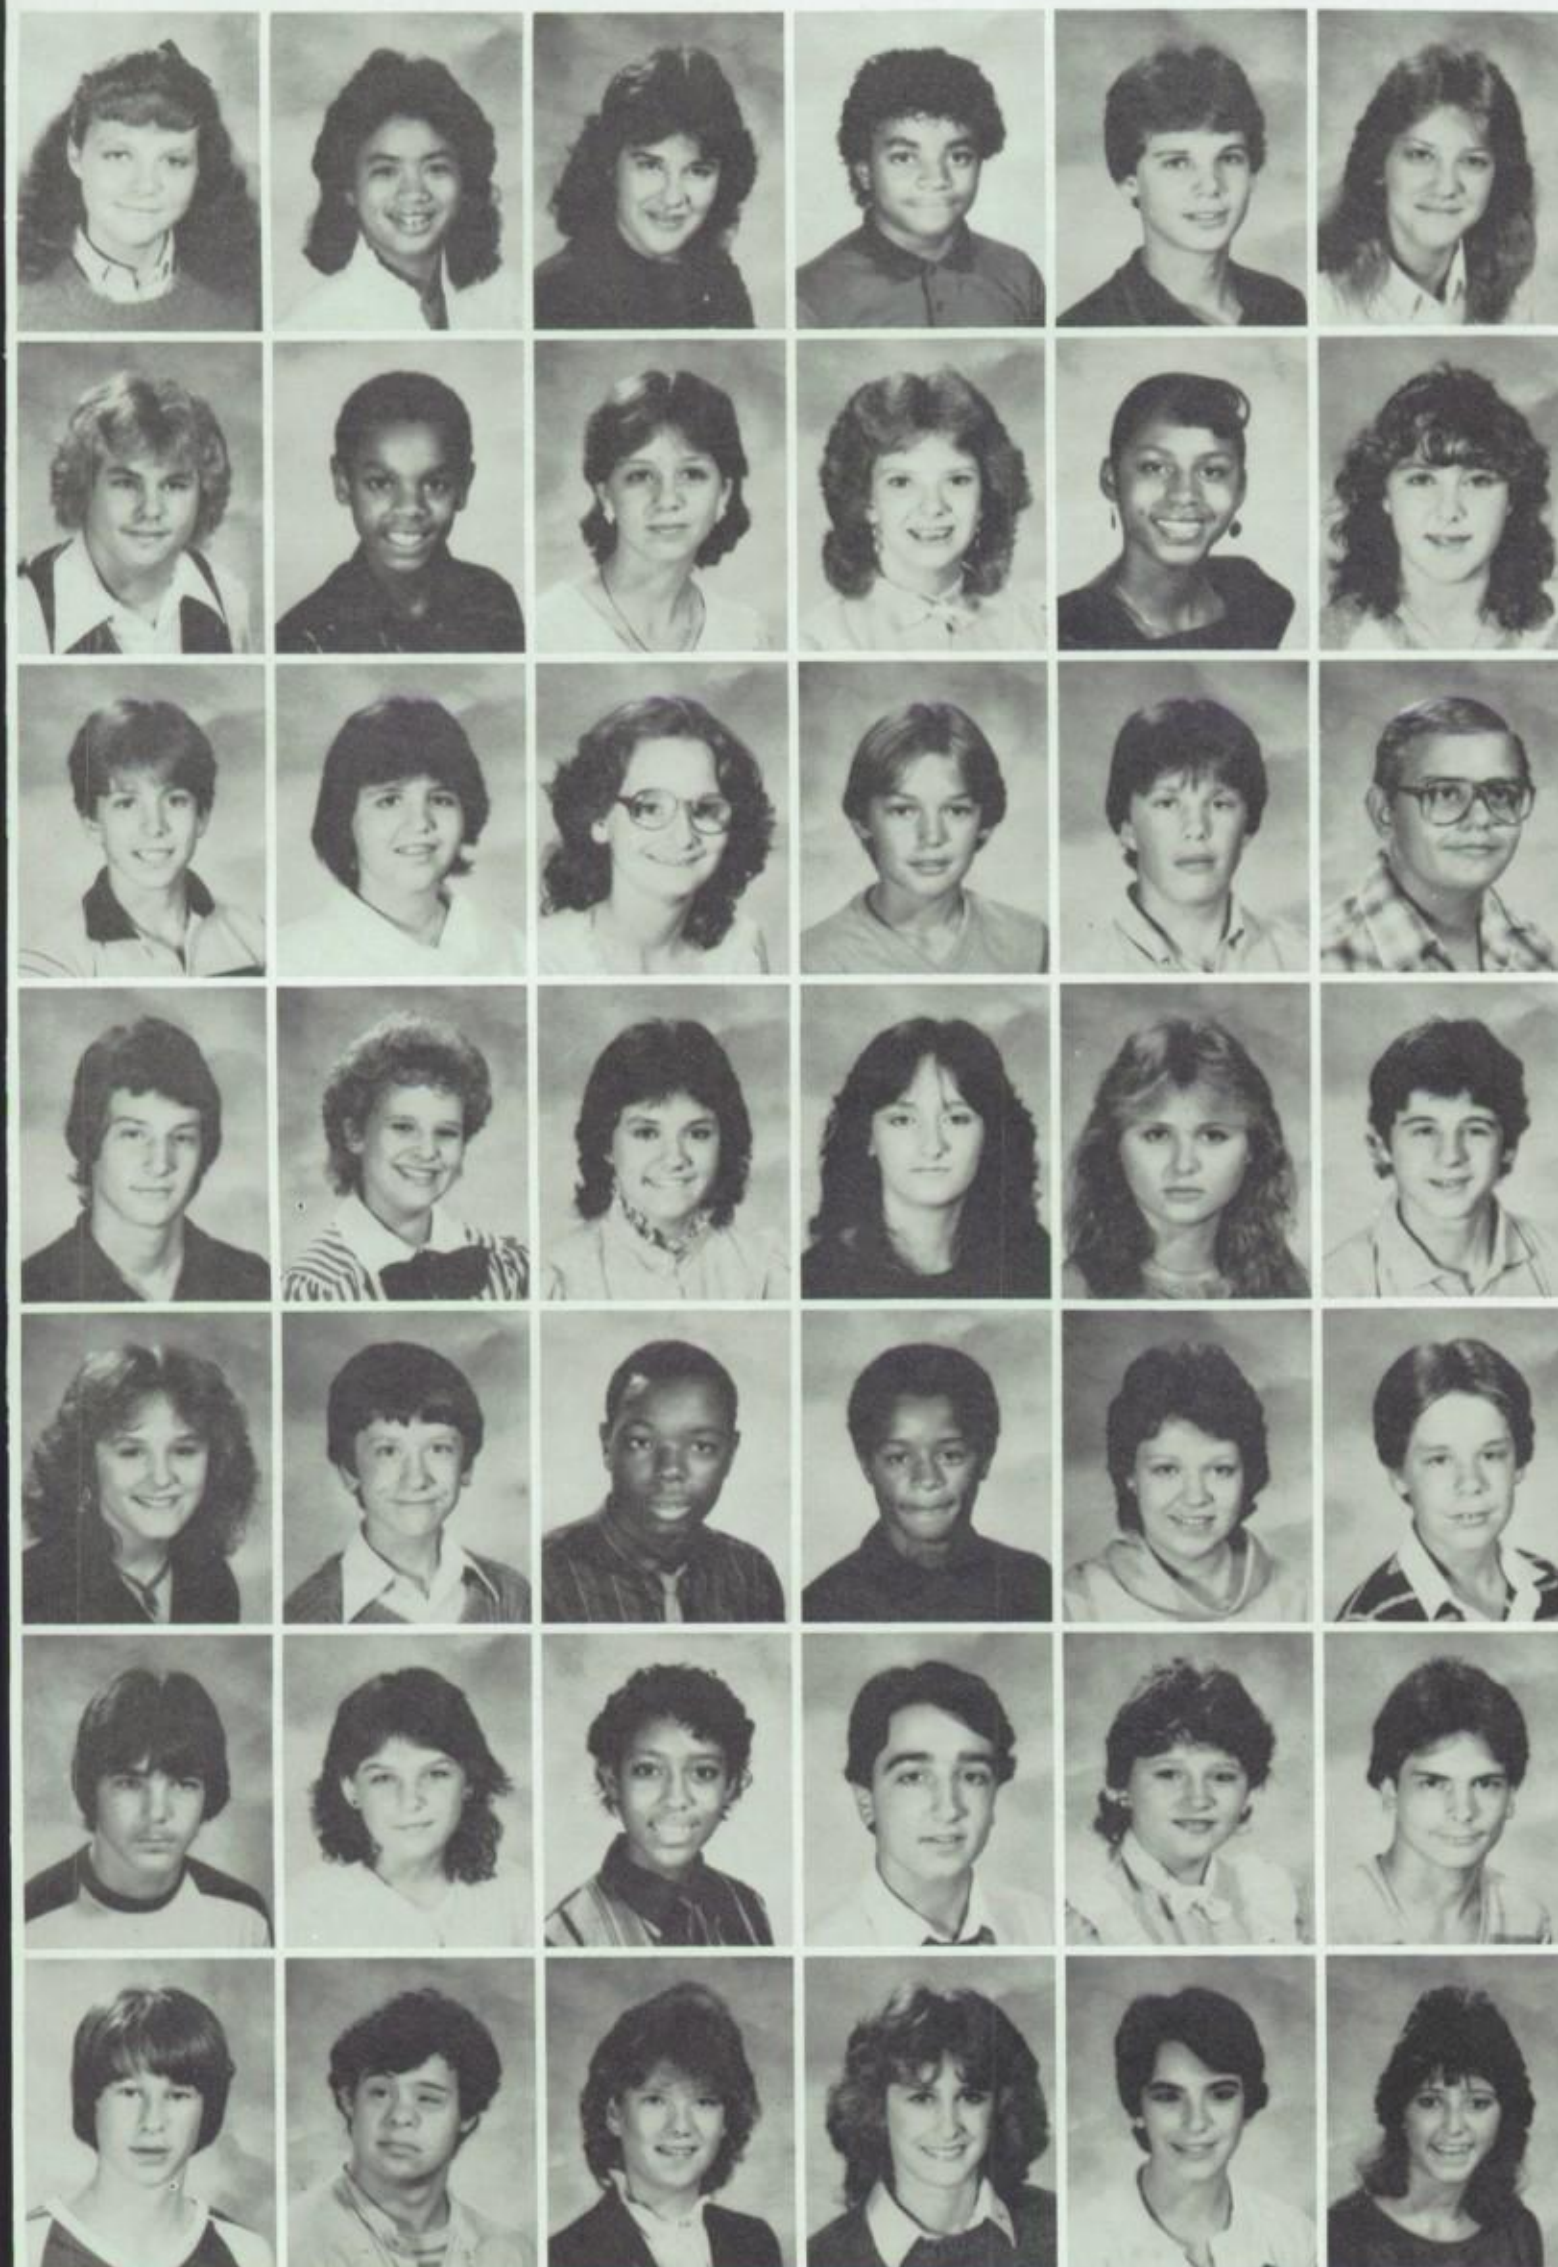

All in all, these officers did a great job. They really worked to keep their class together and get things rolling.

Talented, interesting and energetic are just a few of the things that could be said about Marlene Coffaro,

She has been belly-dancing for about two and a half years.

a freshman at the high school.

Marlene has been getting a head start at pursuing a career in theater arts and music. So far she has been in six plays and musicals, including two at the community theater.

One of her main interests out of school is belly dancing. She has been dancing for about two and a half years now. Marlene said that she decided to take lessons when she had to come up with a talent for a beauty pageant, so she asked her aunt to teach her belly dancing.

Her latest contest was the Miss Hemisphere Talent Pageant. She won the locals and then went on to the state pageant in Akron and won that. From there she went on to the national pageant in Miami Beach where she placed 16 out of 56 girls.

Marlene's favorite class was concert choir and favorite teacher was Mrs. Holm. Her other interests include listening to rock music, taking voice lessons, and going out with her friends.

This cherry of a freshman, Stevie Lewis, was yet another flavor that added to the taste of Garfield High.

Who knows? Maybe he's the next Howard Cosell.

Steve's direction in life seems to be pointing toward athletics. He enjoyed the position of halfback on the freshman football team and played baseball in the spring. His interest in sports also lay in his talent for writing. These qualities make him a likely candidate as one of our future sports writers or commentators. Who knows? Maybe he's the new Howard Cosell. (Look out, Howie!)

Steve's biggest influence is Tony Grossi, who is a sports writer for the Plain Dealer.

Chemistry students reacted favorably to Hofman

Ms. Hofman's chemistry students all agreed she was a special person, but not only because of her strange teaching methods.

Aside from being a teacher, Ms. Hofman has a unique personality. She enjoys reading Leo Buscaglia books, playing guitar, singing country songs, and filling the halls with fragrant smells of sulfur. Before coming to Garfield, she graduated as valedictorian at Sacred Heart Academy. She later went on to Ursuline and John Carroll for her degrees in chemistry and teaching. Ms. Hofman has taught at Garfield for 16 years.

As for what flavor she views herself as, Ms. Hofman chose black licorice. She enjoys that flavor because everybody seems to hate it and "it is deliciously black." But when pressed for the real reason, Ms. Hofman replied, "My beagle Mitzi loves that flavor, too. I think it was Mitzi who taught me to love it."

Spengler's done it all, not only in school

Adding flavor to Garfield High, Mr. Spengler has a unique taste all his own. Previously having jobs ranging from playing major slow pitch softball to being a bouncer in bars and at concerts, he now teaches English to juniors and seniors who attend JVS.

In his spare time he reads extensively and has enjoyed the sport of weightlifting for 22 years. Mr. Spengler's education varies from majoring in pre-med to German and modern language instruction. Also being athletically gifted, he said he received seven letters in high school.

Sharing his athletic background, Mr. Spengler coached hockey and cross country for Garfield's teams in previous years.

Mr. Spengler describes himself as being very cinnamon. "Cinnamon can be used many different ways and can taste hot or cold," he explained. He regards himself as a versatile person, and this flavor seems to sum up his personality.

Students who had the privilege of sampling a taste of Mr. Spengler would agree that his taste should be flavor of the year.

After arriving in Garfield Heights last April 1, Mr. Charles Beshara, the new superintendent, found he was enjoying himself immensely. Mr. Beshara previously worked in Lorain County in the Midview Local Schools. He found Garfield to be a friendly community with many outstanding students.

Since Mr. Beshara has been in office, the school system has improved facilities. The enrollment has gone up, so future plans include curriculum changes such as textbooks, new courses, and special programs.

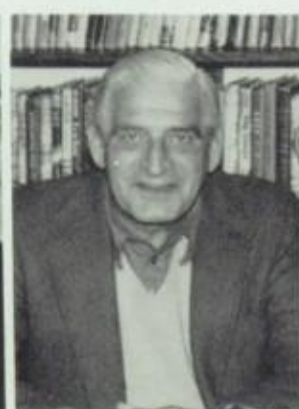

The superintendent feels the school system is an efficient one that uses its funds conservatively, but it is always striving for excellence.

Adult groups boosted the Bulldogs

Did you ever wonder where the band uniforms, majorette uniforms, choir robes, and flag corps uniforms come from? The Music Boosters were founded in 1970 to maintain interest and enthusiasm of local citizens in every music activity.

The athletic boosters have been very successful in maintaining the athletic program at Garfield. They had a number of events, such as clambakes, flea markets, Little Bulldog Wrestling Classic, and bingo, which all helped support athletics.

Learning about computers, playing volleyball with the girls volleyball team, and learning about plant ecology were just a few of the PTA's activities. They also co-authored this year's Bulldog Bulletin.

1984 opened a new door for Garfield Heights. Space Cable installed its first units in the city, and completion was due in mid-1985. A variety of channels were offered on the cable system, including Showtime, HBO, Cinemax, and The Movie Channel. The most significant impact cable TV had on Garfield was the addition of MTV, providing a new twist to the student sub-culture. This big satellite dish is how they do it, guys. Vista Park was closed last September because of a seepage of methane gas which had built up underground. There was a slight chance of explosion but nothing came of it. The gas dissipated after a few weeks and the city planned to drill to get rid of the rest of it. (Photo by Rob Workman)

CONCERTS 84-85

December 5 and 6 the Coliseum was sold out for two outstanding performances by Prince and the Revolution. The Purple Rain Tour had much in store for the audience that battled the snow to get to Richfield. The excitement started as the crowd began to scream at several fake openings by members of his band. Then purple flowers were thrown from the stage, and Prince moved from amp to amp. "Let's Go Crazy" let loose the opening, while "Purple Rain" closed his brief Cleveland stop.

Although Prince held the spotlight, other performers strutted their stuff on Cleveland: Springsteen, Van Halen, the Jacksons, Cyndi Lauper, Huey Lewis, Culture Club, Billy Idol.

And thanks, Leon Collins, for letting us take a picture of Prince from your souvenir program!

OLYMPICS

In 1984 the Summer Olympics were held in Los Angeles, where the Americans showed their many talents. Some events in which the USA excelled were boxing, swimming, track and field, and gymnastics.

Led by super heavyweight Tyrell Biggs, the boxers earned a staggering 11 medals in the games, nine of which were gold. When the Olympics had terminated many of these talented athletes went on to try their skills at professional boxing (as Howard would say).

Another event in which the USA excelled was gymnastics. The men, led by Peter Vidmar and Mitch Gaylord, were able to obtain a gold medal in team competition. The women, sparked by the energetic Mary Lou Retton, had to settle for a silver. Overall, the entire gymnastics team won a combined total of 15 medals.

Although the summer games ended on a positive note at the closing ceremonies in Los Angeles, there were many tears of both joy and sorrow. Tears of happiness were shed by track star Valerie Brisco-Hooks, who won three gold medals. Sharing these feelings was Carl Lewis, who won four gold medals. On the other hand, bitter disappointment was suffered by Mary Decker. While running in the 3000 meters, Decker stumbled and fell, ending her hopes of victory until 1988.

The thrill of victory, the agony of defeat, and what's that strange odor? In the Olympic Village, security guards were called to investigate a peculiar smell. Upon their arrival, they found some Korean athletes hovered over a small Hibachi roasting a few very large snakes.

The Olympic spirit lives.

WAIT 'TILL NEXT YEAR!

"Wait until next year" seems like a phrase that can sum up Cleveland's professional sports teams.

For instance, the Indians have had that as their slogan for 30 years now. Last summer they finished in sixth place while the Detroit Tigers were winning the World Series from the San Diego Padres. This year the Tribe has a new general manager but the same slogan.

The Browns had such a disastrous year that they fired head coach Sam Rutigliano in the middle of the season. It didn't help.

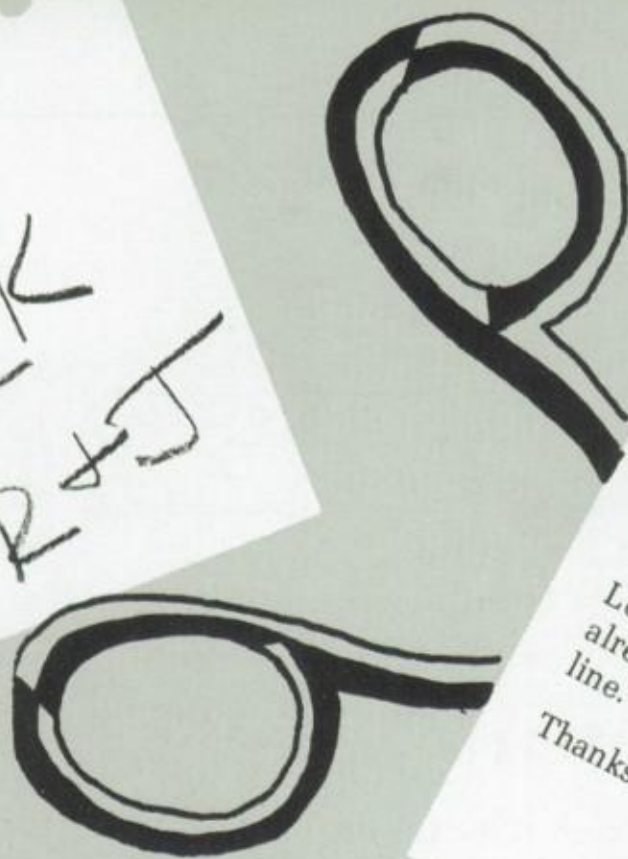

The Cavs played down to expectations again this season, keeping Coliseum seats cold but clean.

What about the Force? They planned on being in the MISL playoffs again this season after losing out in the semifinals last year. The indoor soccer league's all-star game was held at the Coliseum February 24. Cleveland's representatives were Craig Allen and Kai Haaskivi.

And in the Super Bowl, the 49ers blew away the Dolphins in the much-publicized battle of quarterbacks Joe Montana and Dan Marino.

Origin of Garfield High

When the world was first created, and the great lizards roamed freely, there came a being. This being had an intelligence that was greater than anything the universe had ever seen. His name was Gar of the field. Clothed only in a fig leaf, he united the beasts to create a temple for him. The lizards searched the earth to find barf-brown bricks and disgusting paint. It was a hard task, but the obedient lizards did it. Gar then told them to use the bricks and paint to build his temple. Well, the lizards, while on break, got hold of some bad weeds and really got messed up. The lizards couldn't read the blueprints made by Gar, so they decided to fake it. Foundation dug here, bricks laid there, the temple soon looked like a school. Oh no! Gar, thoroughly disgusted, decided to rid himself of the faulty workers, so he turned them into cleaning women.

After the age of the lizard, Gar left with only his name to live on. Years later, while a group of adventurers were excavating in a small Cleveland suburb, they came upon Gar's lost temple. The adventurers decided to name the city Garfield and to punish all the little children by sending them to the lost temple. Well, the temple soon became a learning institution, and that is the tale of Garfield Heights High.

We surveyed 100 students in our studio audience and asked them the question . . .

“What was your favorite part of the yearbook?”

The two teams are ready to answer the big question on “Yearbook Feud.” You can see our advisor Mr. Jambor doing his best Richard Dawson game show host imitation as he reads the question. The team captains look to their respective yearbook teams for a little help.

On the left that’s co-editor Lisa Kaliszewski on the phone with Michael. She needs help from her “Oberlin” teammates. Copy editor Kelley McVoy thinks the articles were the best part. Academics editor Donna Buczak votes for the academics section. But clubs editor Connie Smith says the clubs section was best. Wait! Index editor Wendy Trzaska thinks—are you getting the picture?

book. But business manager Barb Zdanek says the ad section was best. People editor Donna Sabol, mug shots in hand, is sure the people section was everyone’s favorite. Last but not least, sports and design editor Diane Perchinske thinks the sports section might be best—or the cover.

Well, what’s the answer? Will Lisa get off the phone in time for her next class? Will Amy have enough markers and medicine to last the year? And will Mr. J ever figure out how to pronounce the word on that card? Come on now, really, should Big Boy stay or go?

For the answers to these questions, turn this page upside down (or if you’d rather not tear it, turn the whole book upside down).

What was your favorite part of the yearbook? Survey says: 57, my picture; 18, what yearbook?; 11, my boyfriend's picture; 8, my girlfriend's picture; 4, Mr. Jambor's picture; 2, I can sign my name. Answers to other questions: Lisa doesn't have a next class. She just showed up at school to work on yearbook. Amy doesn't need her markers now that cheerleading is over, and she can always get more medicine from the power pack or a fellow Hall Monitor. Mr. J knows how to pronounce that word, he just doesn't know what it means. And Big Boy should stay, by a vote of 14 to 6 as taken throughout the year in the yearbook office.

All Kinds of Flavors came in five flavors: blueberry, cherry, grape, chocolate, and orange, which corresponded with the royal blue, red, purple, chocolate, and bittersweet shoe-grain silk screened covers, which were designed by Diane Perchinske. The reflex blue on silver end sheets were designed by Jeff Rapiey. The book was printed on 80 lb. enamel paper.

Headlines are 48 pt. Saul Bold Italic with 18 pt. Souvenir subheads. Body copy is 10 pt. Ballardvale, and captions are 8

pt. Souvenir Bold.

The 1984 Garfield Heights High School yearbook won first place awards from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association and Great Lakes Interscholastic Press Association.

Inter-collegiate Press printed 584 copies of All Kinds of Flavors.

Our thanks to Jim Barbour of ICP and to Tim, Glenn, Jeanne, and Joyce at Tim Carnes Photography.

Could there have been one flavor that was the favorite? To some it might have been all the exciting events that took place over the course of the year. Others may have taken a taste of the different clubs and their activities. Sports may have hit a home run with many, while everyone loved to see their friends in the halls and lunchroom every day.

How about a combination? Togetherness: that was the secret behind this mixture. The different aspects of each day came together and made up a melting pot, just as the immigrants did stepping off the boats into a new life. The year has seen both good and bad, old and new, by the faces that passed through the hallways. No two days, no two people could ever be the same, just as this year was like no other. It was a year and a school filled with all kinds of flavors.

Father Time may permit the clock to be turned back just once more, giving all the chance to recall the memories. Some may remember that "A" in chemistry or that new friendship, but when looking back on Garfield this year, everyone's last thought will be that it was simply delicious.

CLOSE

Close the familiar book today
For that's the only way you can open the new one
Pages old and crinkled
Contain a year of experiences

Close up the sticking locker
Someone else will soon claim it
This one door opened and shut through good and bad
Your friend in this fast passing time

Close the rooms which sheltered you and your friends
Every day you came for safety, together
New people will take your place
But not your memories

Close the bonds of friendship which made days bearable
Hallways swarming with chatter enjoying every word

Close your thoughts only for a brief time
Bring back each day little by little
After the final bell rings
The year becomes a new chapter in history

Close this treasure chest of surprises
For the last time
You are not permitted to enter unless
You have traveled this path and made your own trail

LOOKING BACK AT a treasure chest of memories: Garfield Heights High; a triple scoop of students David Gibson, Demetrius Graham, and Lori Gorenc; and senior Donna Buczak bidding farewell to her alma mater. Photos by Amy Rawlins and Barb Polak.
